Business has been unusually good and a large season is recorded. Orders are booked for next fall and an other busy year is in evidence. The Aldrich Saw frame manufactured in a building on Beal street has taken well and promises to become popular with woodsmen.

Some time ago, the Norway Woman's Club voted to help with a Young People's Department at the Norway Public Library, as there was a growing demand for good books for the youth, and a Tag Day was launched. Norway Victorious in Carnival

Rumford Wins Second and South Paris Third

Norway High School won a decisive victory Saturday afternoon over a field of three other high schools during the Oxford County winter carnival held in Pride's field in Norway. Norway scored 43 points, Rumford registered 29, South Paris secured 24 and Oxford failed to land inside the scoring territory. Norway retains the high school championship of the county earned last season.

Schlicker of Rumford produced the thrill in the mile skating race on the rink 200x100 feet. He was hard pressed by Sullivan of Rumford and Card of South Paris, who kept at his heels the entire distance.

The fifty yard ski race for girls proved another feature with Dullea of Norway and Heikkinen of South Paris straining for first place. This was a speedy scrap and close all the way along.

Schilicker proved the scoring ace for his school and for the carnival. He registered 15 of the 29 points made by Stephens High of Rumford. Aldrich cleaned up 13 points and Ashton made 11 for the winning school. By agreement, no time was taken in any event.

The events were staged on a small amount of dry snow and ideal carnival conditions were hard to find after the rain of last week that reduced a small amount of snow to a few inches of crust and ice. Summary:

100 yard dash for boys, on skis—Aldrich 1, of Norway; Heikkinen, 2, of South Paris; Colby, 3, of South Paris.

50 yard dash on snowshoes, for girls—Won by Wiles of Norway; 2, Hosmer, Norway; 3, Cameron, of South Paris.

100 yard dash for boys, on snowshoes—Won by Ashton, of Norway; 2, Aldrich, Norway; 3, Breton, of Rumford.

50 yard dash on skis for girls—Won by Dullea, of Norway; 2, Heikkinen, of South Paris; 3, Knapp, of Norway.

1-2 mile on snowshoes for boys—Won by Ashton, of Norway; 2, Breton, of Rumford; 3, Parsons, of South Paris.

440 yard dash on skates, for boys—Won by Schiliker of Rumford; 2, Sullivan of Rumford; 3, Hammond, of South Paris.

1 mile on skis for boys—Won by Aldrich, Norway; 2, Heikkinen, South Paris; 3, Green, Norway.

800 yard dash on skates—Won by Schiliker of Rumford; 2, tied between Sullivan of Rumford and Hammond of South Paris.

Medley Race—Four people on a side, two on snowshoes and two on skis, running 100 yards. Won by Norway, Aldrich, Green on skis, and Yates, Ashton on snowshoes.

Mile race on skates—Won by Schiliker of Rumford; 2, Sullivan of Rumford; 3, Card of South Paris.

MISS BICKNELL ENTERTAINED AT BRIDGE

Miss Hazel Bicknell entertained a large group of laides at bridge, Wednesday evening, this being her first party. Seven tables were arranged in her Fashion Shop which was tastefully decorated with fresh cut flowers, among them were roses and carnations and a bright color scheme suggestive of St. Valentine's season. The table covers were dark red and made very attractive.

The play commenced at 8 o'clock and continued until 11 with Mrs. Molly May in charge of checking the score. Mrs. Etta Maxim won first prize and Miss Clara Shepard secured the second trophy. Mrs. Doris Snell was awarded the consolation.

Dainty refreshments served after the play were in charge of the hostess with her sister, Mrs. Eula Wood of Auburn assisting. The affair was a social success and much enjoyed by all. The guests were Mrs. Pearl Kilburn, Mrs. Annie Andrews, Mrs. Marion Heath, Mrs. Gladys Greenleaf, Mrs. Ava Wight, Mrs. Bessie Wolcott, Mrs. Irene Locke, Mrs. Alma Packard, Mrs. Doris Snell, Mrs. Pauline McCormack, Mrs. Molly May, Mrs. Bessie Hill, Mrs. Etta Maxim, Mrs. Doris Jack, Mrs. Virginia Luce, Mrs. Mildred Hosmer, Mrs. Clara Lack, Mrs. Frances Twitchell, Mrs. Helena Nelson, Mrs. Ethelyn Lapham, Mrs. Adeline Klain, Miss Tessa Thibodeau, Miss Winona Flanders, Miss Clara Shepard, Mrs. Louise Wood of Oxford, Mrs. J. CHEMICAL TRUCK GREAT FIRE FIGHTER

A still alarm to chief Giles Frost, Friday forenoon, called the Chemical and crew to Dr. Charles A. Stephen's residence "The Laboratory" at Norway Lake. After a quick run of two miles the firemen found only smouldering embers in the walls of the house near the furnace pipe. The fire having been extinguished. As a precaution, a careful inspection was made from the ground floor to the attic in search of any fire which might be smouldering under the roof. The strong wind for a time threatened to spread the flames beyond control.

The truck was again called to Norway Lake, Sunday, for a fierce chimney fire at Mrs. Lottie Crane's house. Another quick run was made and chemicals from the tank soon had the blaze extinguished with out damage. The chimney was thoroughly cleaned before the firemen left the premises.

SURPRISE PARTY FOR D. L. JOSLIN

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Witham were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Joslin, Tuesday evening. The dinner was given as a surprise by Mrs. Joslin and son, Irving, in honor of Mr. Joslin's birthday. Mr. Joslin received many gifts and greetings, both by cards and telephone during the evening.

Rook and music on the radio was enjoyed until 9.15 when Mr. Witham suggested that the party go on a hike which was enthusiastically received.

They hiked to a spot in a nearby wood in Oxford which had been prepared and a fire made in advance by Mr. Witham, unknown to the rest of the party. Weenies, rolls and marshmallows were toasted over the fire. Story telling and singing were enjoyed around the camp fire. As the fire died the party stood, united, and sang "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

The party hiked back to the village at a late hour all wishing Mr. Joslin many happy birthdays and expressing the greatest time ever and one that will long be remembered.

The Daughters of Veterans held regular meeting, Friday evening with large attendance and the newly installed officers were in charge for the first time. Several matters of importance were discussed. One new application was received. A social hour followed with a penny lunch and penny games and stunts. At the next meeting there will be a full rehearsal.

Ten cars loaded with pulp and bark were shipped from Norway freight yard, Tuesday, and a like number went out Wednesday. Fourteen teams and trucks have been counted at one time delivering their products in the yard. Thus far there has been the most lively outbound freight business in years.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Smith and son, Glendon, Mrs. Daniel Smith and Miss Lola D. Smith motored to Auburn, Saturday and had supper and a social evening with Mrs. Smith's daughter, Mrs. Omer G. Fournier.

Norway High School

Friday evening, January 27, a high school social was held in the gymnasium. The greater part of the student body and all of the teachers were there. The program consisted of stunts, games and dances. Each class was responsible for one stunt—Kenneth Goodwin, '28, did a tumbling stunt, a group of Freshmen, Diana Perry, George Parkes, Albert Lafrance, Marjorie Judkins, Violet Upton and Dolor Lafrance, sang "In the Time of Roses." Mildred Gallant accompanied them. Margaret Cummings, Paul Brown and Richard Holt, '29, gave an amusing farce entitled "The New Schoolmarm." This was in costume and was especially enjoyed by the students. Maurice Flint, '29, impersonated the "Doctor from New York" who instructed everyone in habits that will insure good health. Between the stunts the high school orchestra furnished music for games and dancing.

Special assembly last week was in charge of Miss Winslow of the faculty and Evelyn Brown of the Student Council. The program consisted of Friday night, February 3, the Norway Girls' Basket Ball Team plays Hallowell. The Norway Girls defeated Hallowell in a three court game on their home floor. It is expected the Hallowell girls will stage a strong "come-back" Friday night, and the game should prove very interesting. Norway boys' team expected to play Oxford High, but due to a mix-up in Oxford's dates, the game has been cancelled. There will be a game, however, and dodgers and posters will be out, giving the name of the opposing team. Watch for the dodgers!

A debating team has been chosen as follows: Speakers, Evelyn Saleeby, Maurice Flint, Charlotte Longley and Earl Pierce. Alternates: Elizabeth Sanborn and Mabel Saunders.

NORWAY NURSING SERVICE

The evening class in Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick met for the seventh lesson on Monday, seven members were present.

In addition to the usual discussion of the text-book assignment, the nurse demonstrated preparation and giving of a mustard foot-bath and an enema. During the period members of the class practiced bed making, use of the clinical Thermometer with counting pulse and resperations, making a custard plaster and preparing a hot water bottle for use. Miss Laura Knowlton, R. N. Red Cross representative came from Augusta to visit the class. Her experience and perspective make her comment and criticism valuable.

With the end of the half year of school, High School girls were given an opportunity to take the course in Home Hygiene and Care of the Sick. It is elective with one point of credit. The class of ten met first on Monday afternoon in the nurse's office in the last period of the school day. There will be two classes a week, Monday and Thursday afternoons. With this plan the course will be complete at the end of the school year.

In the schools an attempt has been made to check corrections of defects of teeth, vision, etc., of the finding of which parents were notified. While the number of corrections to date is not large, it is to be remembered that the time since inspection has been short and that the cost must be figured in the family budget. Especially among the older ones who were told of the need for dental care at the time of inspection. There is interest and desire to have the care as soon as possible. Finding boys and girls in all classes who have not acquired the tooth brush habit, one questions what large proportion of the decayed teeth seen might have been saved.

Attendance at Well Baby Conference last Friday numbered six babies and seven adults.

Borrowed: A good crop of wild oats will grow where weeds won't even sprout.

If your mind is continually upon the subject as to how you can get more business, you will get more. You can't beat individual initiative, energy and ambition.

"The days are getting longer; the sun is higher. So glad you are feeling your oats again," closing remarks of a letter from D. C. Seitz.

We print the above simply to show we could read part of the letter he wrote. If the interpretation is not correct, we ask forgiveness.

A Massachusetts auditor says the Wearies are "off in figgerin'."

"If John Abraham Fitz Woodman depends upon the Wearies to keep track of the number of sheep coming to him on his centennial birthday, he is likely to be short more than sixty-seven million sheep. The Wearies, however, should not be accused of deliberately trying to "do" John out of a few sheep. The mistake is due to a little oversight in their calculation. They are not strong on figgerin' anyway. They overlooked the fact that John was entitled to two lambs on the day of his birth, which accounts for the difference of over sixty-seven millions at the end of one hundred years. As a matter of fact, John will have coming to him 133,169,152 sheep on his one hundredth birthday. And if the Wearies had succeeded in borrowing the number of pennies necessary to represent the number of sheep the bank would have had to pass out to them pennies to the amount of $1,331,691.52."

Mr. Woodman is really perplexed. He is afraid he will not be able to give his flock one foddering of beans. Sheep without beans do not thrive. He and others have commenced calculating on how many train loads it will require.

John says a sheep in hand is better than millions in the bush, and that he will be satisfied with the half million sheep now due him, if they are delivered promptly.

Some people are so "forward looking" they don't see the devil lurking behind.

Our Mr. Mitchell of Alton N. H. is responsible for the following:

"Government, investing the prices of clothing, found a firm in New York selling suits for $125 that cost, delivered, slightly less than $23; imported sweaters at $15 that cost, laid down in the shop $3."

The above is about in proportion to the supposed printing office profits.

Harry Shorey of the Bridgton News says he would not swap printing offices with us as he is making more profit than we are and doing much less work. We feels sure he tells the truth.

How about shoes costing $1.87 per pair and selling for $9.00? It is said to be a fact. We can't prove it however.

The January issue of "Safeguarding America Against Fire," states that Maine, in 1926, suffered fire losses amounting to $1,039,120 from "Defective chimneys and flues, sparks on roofs, and stoves, furnaces, boilers and their pipes." All of which, the publication states are "strictly preventable causes." "Yet to the appeal for carefulness against fire and better construction, only a moderate amount of interest can be aroused—except in a few citizens in each community."

The total loss by fire in the United States in 1926 was $561,980,751, representing almost 10 per cent of all the money in circulation in the United States during 1926. A sum sufficient to maintain and operate our entire Navy Department four years.

Nine cords peeled pulp for a load! Think of it! Three loads a day. Twenty-seven cords! Three dollars per cord on the car. It takes some crew to handle it. What would Isaac Noyes and Len Carter think of that?

You may not be aware, hence we are to tell you: Seven-tenths of our advertising is set from new copy every week. Twenty years ago the advertisers changed on an average of once in four weeks. Ten years back, every other week would do, but now the wise and careful advertiser changes copy each week.

It makes more expense in the office—more than the 5 cents per inch extra that is paid—but brings better returns to the users of space.

Look at the new advertising in this issue. Watch out and read it. It is worthy of your attention.

It would be impossible to produce a local paper, were it not for the advertising.

Sometime there will be a universal insurance plan conducted on the above principle, which will be a mighty good thing —for the people.

He (our former competitor) says he believes every old human machine ought to go into the shop (hospital) at least once a year for a general inspection and overhauling, merely as a precautionary measure. All the men he mentions have adopted this plan and go there regularly, even though they are feeling perfectly well. You send your auto, if you have any regard for it, to be carefully inspected and overhauled and repaired if need be, now and then, they say—why shouldn't men regularly undergo the same treatment?

The man who doesn't feel ashamed of himself when his wife bursts into tears is a brute.

Cheer up!

The world isn't any worse than it ever was.

It seems worse because populations have increased, and the news of scandal travels faster and farther than it used to.

The man who says the world is lost and that sin has increased and that all righteousness has been defeated and this generation is the most reckless ever, is a blooming idiot.

Because he is a pessimist.

The man who thinks everything is lost is unconsciously conceding defeat.

He has been thwarted in all his ambitions, he has mismanaged, his vision has become twisted, his inclinations have become sinful, and he thinks everything and everybody are as he sees them.

One reason we believe people are better morally today than years ago is the fact that people live longer.

There is no doubt but that wrong doing, excesses, irregular hours, and hell raising in general injure the physical being.

And yet this generation lives longer than past generations.

Indicating that this generation is not as wicked as some old cranks think it is.

HOME NEWSPAPER

If there is anything in your town worth talking about, ten chances to one your own newspaper had a hand in putting it there.

Every town gets its money's worth through the home newspaper.

It's the wagon that carries all your goods to market. It ought to be kept in good repair. It will pay to grease it, paint it and keep its running gears in good shape and shelter.

It is the guardian and defender of every interest, the forerunner and pioneer of every movement and the sturdy advocate of law and order.

Now listen to this:

The actuaries of the large life insurance companies report that within the last fifty years the span of human life has been lengthened ten years.

To be sure, this increase in life's span is due partly to the better care given babies.

But a degenerate world wouldn't give such splendid care to babies.

The fact is, friends, there are thousands and thousands of decent, gentle, dutiful people on this earth today, and good behavior averages up better now than in past years.

You hear much of crime only because facilities to get crime news are highly developed today.

Seventy-five years ago a hundred men could have been murdered in Central America and we would not have heard anything about it.

Today a man could kick his mother-in-law in Japan and we would all read about it tomorrow morning.

So don't worry about the old world.

It isn't so worse.

But if you really think the situation is bad, you can improve it by washing your own ears first.—Stolen.

Our old-time New Hampshire competitor, who, by the way, assures us that he is still one of our best friends notwithstanding, is getting back at us again gently by telling us that we (the old man) is the only thing around the Advertiser he can find that squeaks; that it's our own fault; that we have been taking excellent care of all the machines around the shop except one, and that's ourself—the squeaky one. And then he goes on to tell about some other men he knows of in the city where he lives who are near the century mark of life and still vigorously conducting their big business enterprises. But they take good care of their most valuable machines—themselves—and never allow them to get squeaky.

For one thing, our old New Hampshire friend says, we eat too much—twice as much as we need and twice as much as our badly worn and weakened bodily machine is capable of taking care of. Of all things! Who ever heard of a Maine country newspaper editor eating too much?

The doctors tell us for one thing that every ounce of excess fat we carry on our bodies is an unneccessary strain on our hearts—the most delicate and sensative part of our bodily machinery. Overeating naturally causes the excess fat, they say— this and carelessness—or laziness.

The more we think about it the more we like the old Chinese method, of paying the doctors only as long as they succeed in keeping their patients well. All sickness or disability under this arrangement is at the doctor's expense. Then he looks after his patients carefully all the time and sees that they live properly.

Fred Hinckley of South Portland wants to be governor and agrees with Tudor Gardiner. He goes at it a different way but it amounts to the same. Develop Maine! even to the breaking of the "Governor-making Idiot Act" bearing the honored name of the late Senator Fernald.

Develop and sell our surplus products under proper restriction to the world's market.

We are beginning to feel that we ought to belong to the Republican Party so our vote could count in pushing this good work along.

Let's not fight over the past in developing Maine Water Power. Forget it. Get together and do something. That is the way. Be sensible and fair.

January Temperature

No use getting chesty over the belief January presented unusually mild averages. According to John Wight's thermometer readings taken at 6 a. m., we were but one degree warmer mornings than in January, 1927, and practically the same for January, 1926.

Lest we forget, just scan the 1925 column showing eighteen mornings at zero and way below, giving an average of 4 degrees under the zero mark. We may not recall that cold season, but there are John's figures.

The variation the past month of 68 degrees is the highest in four years. It was 60 degrees in 1927; 52 degrees in 1926; 58 in 1925.

Following is the January temperature at 6 a. m. over a four year period.

NEW HAMPSHIRE'S GREAT STONE FACE

Facing the land of the sunshine,
Long ages you've gazed into space;
Like Egypt's Sphinx you change not
Your rugged and clear-cut face.
In fashion and form like the Chieftain
Who counseled his tribes of old
To live always with Peace on the hearthstone,
So to us is the legend told.
Possessed of the vision of ages,
What scenes you have witnessed, what changes!
Since you came into being, long centuries past,
Oh, King of our mountain range!
Famed throughout loyal New England,
No state has a land-mark like thee,
From East and from West come marvelling hosts
Thy wonderful Profile to see!
Personified calm and serenity,
In silence and reverence we gaze;
May your shadow never be forsaken,
May you stand through the length of our days!

A SIMPLE RADIO HINT

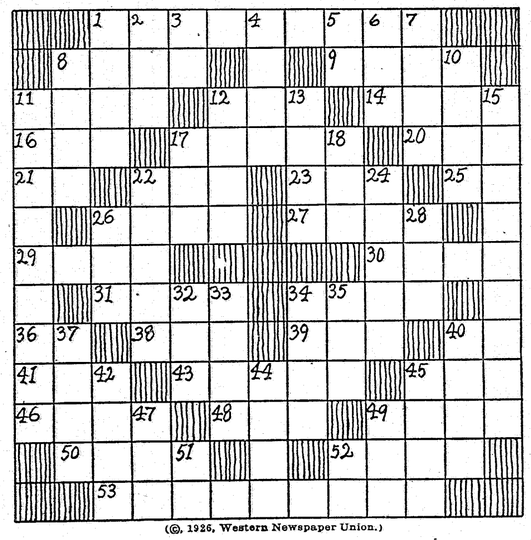

Have you ever had your A battery charged and been dissatisfied with the reception obtained immediately afterward? Perhaps you have blamed humidity, static or even the man who, charged your battery.

Quite often the trouble is in your contact—where you screw or clap the positive or negative wire to the terminal of your battery. The end of the wire may have been corroded by battery acid or even by long exposure to the air. Perhaps the terminal itself needs a little rub with sandpaper.

A sure method of making these contacts one hundred per cent. efficient is to clean both terminals and wires, and then turn the dials so that some nearby station is tuned in. Clamp the negative terminal tightly, then adjust the wire of your positive until the music comes in the strongest—clamping it tightly when in that position. Where batteries are in the cellar it may be necessary to have some one up-stairs tune in several stations before the program may be heard by you—but when this is done your contact may be made a perfect one.

Best Treated Externally

THAT'S why modern mothers prefer Vicks—it cannot upset delicate stomachs. Rubbed on throat and chest, it acts two ways at once:

(1) Its healing vapors, released by the body heat, are inhaled direct to the air passages;

(2) It "draws out" the soreness like an old-fashioned poultice.

Child Management

By Dr. D. A. Thom

WHY DO CHILDREN DISOBEY?

Whether children are obedient or disobedient is to a great extent dependent on the standards and requirement of mothers and fathers.

While Tommy is deeply engrossed in play with his toys or in a new book the carelessly shouted orders of his mother, busy with her dish washing, may pass unheeded, such commands having become so familiar that he has developed the same negative adaptation to them as the stenographer develops toward the hammering of typewriters in a busy office. He may have heard the command and appreciated what was wanted, but experience may have taught him that a command ignored by him is one forgotten by his mother—so why should he worry?

There may, however, be some doubt in his mind what to expect, for on one day mother allows her undecided request to drop unnoticed, while on the next she may take time from her work to administer swift and sure punishment. Inconsistency in discipline keeps the child in a most upset state of mind and soon his response to any request comes to depend on his interest in his immediate occupation and his willingness to take a chance.

It may be that Tommy is capitalizing his disobedience. Often he has heard mother say, after coaxing and pleading a while, "Now, if you eat your dinner like a nice boy, you may have some candy," or "If you stop making so much noise, you may have a penny." If Tommy has learned that such offers follow a lack of response to the first request, it is only natural he should wait until they are made before complying. By holding out, he may obtain greater material gain and also far more attention and interest. It is something to be distinguished, if only as the "despair" of the family.

Threats of action by policemen, "bogy men," and doctors are a most unfortunate method to use in obtaining obedience. Either they cause hampering, fear, and timidity or else at an early age the child comes to realize that they are idle and meaningless and turns them to his immediate advantage. Tommy may learn to play up fear of doctors, for instance, so that by an outburst of yelling and kicking he may avoid having his teeth cared for or his eyes examined.

WHY WEAR JEWELRY?

Why wear jewelry if not to bring out your own good points as well as the beauty and attractiveness of the jewel? It is one of the functions of the jewels to bring beauty into every-day life.

From the earliest times man has sought adornment for his person. This desire for adornment is both legitimate and praiseworthy, since the wearing of beautiful things not only makes the wearer happy but gives pleasure to those who see them as well, thus in its way helping man to obey the injunction to love his neighbor as himself.

The inherent desire of everyone is to wear jewels, but those jewels should be chosen with care—chosen for the individual who is to wear them with due regard to her complexion, size and style—her personality.

A woman's jewels are such intimate things that she should have a feeling of friendliness for them and she has it if they are truly hers, that is, if as they should, they enhance, not obliterate her fine qualities, so that her personality is seen first before they are noticed. Nothing that one wears should be of the sort to attract attention to itself rather than to the wearer. This is why jewels should fit. No woman would think of buying a costly hat or gown without being sure that it was hat or gown; that is that it fitted her and harmonized with her coloring and general style. Yet the usefulness of hats and gowns is limited to a comparative short time as a rule. How much more care should be spent upon the selection of jewelry, which is expected to last a lifetime and longer.

George C. Eames of Bangor, committee on publication says: Occasionally some newspaper writer refers to Christian Science as teaching that "illness and disability are merely matters of imagination", and this impression seems to be quite general in some localities. What Christian Science really teaches on this subject is that disease has a mental origin though not imaginary. "The procuring cause and foundation of all sickness is fear, ignorance, or sin." (Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, page 411). These mental conditions work injury to physical health, but the spiritualization of thought that Christianization which eliminates evil beliefs from the human consciousness, not only prevents disease but heals it. As the Scripture says, "For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace."

NEWRY—SUNDAY RIVER VALLEY

Mrs. Sunder Joshi (Ella E. Kendall) recently wrote that she, with her sister, Miss Ruth Marcia Kendall, had opened a dressmaking parlor at 30 Brattle St., Cambridge, Mass. Miss Ruth has been head dressmaker for a number of years in a fashionable establishment and Mrs. Joshi was cashier in the savings department of Harvard Square Bank for several years and they both have an extended social and business acquaintance. They are daughters of Mrs. Sarah Kendall and the late Herbert M. Kendall of this place.

The roads are in very good shape, the caterpillar tractor recently purchased is doing good work and the good roads up the valley and in the town are much appreciated.

Real Medicine Stops Obstinate Hang-On Coughs

No matter how severe, how stubborn or how long standing your cough is, here's a way that's sure to stop it or money refunded.

A medicine, long the standard of doctors, for us in coughs and colds that must be stopped is the medicine you should take. It is called Adamson's Balsam. Act in two ways to end the cough and does it, too.

First it breaks up the phlegm, soothes the inflamed membrane and gives the throat muscles a chance to expel the phlegm. That stops your racking cough, and like a healing poultice, it takes the soreness out of the delicate throat lining.

Other elements, not found in ordinary sweet, sugary syrups go into the system through the blood and attack the germs right at the seat of the trouble and in a day or two every trace of danger is gone.

Adamson's Balsam contains no dope, dangerous drugs or chloroform. It's wonderful for children. It certainly stops coughs—Easy ones in a dose or two—Hard ones in a day or two. Two sizes, 35c and 75c.

The Merchants' Credit Association

This is a clearing house for credit information showing how a person has paid his bills in the past. We have the ratings of 8,000 people of these towns and surrounding trade territory listed in our files.

How Are You Rated?

You don't need to ask us, for no one knows as well as you do, how you pay your bills. If your record is "bad" why not start the New Year by making it "good" and if it is "good", unless you have an unusual run of hard luck, we can bank on your keeping it "good."

If something happens, as we all know, that a man or woman will make a promise to pay but, through illness or misfortune, cannot keep that promise. Under such circumstances if an honest explanation is made to the merchant, it is safe to say that in every case an extension of time would be granted and your credit standing saved.

Is Your Credit Rating of Value?

Most certainly, for the merchants, professional and business men throughout this co-operative organization

Know Your Credit.

You can never tell when an emergency may arise, and you may need to use it to the limit. So you see, you hurt no one so much as you hurt YOURSELF when you fail to keep it good. 5-6

FEW LETTERS RECEIVED—MORE WANTED

We want still more letters. Our appeal for letters in last week's issue has been nicely complied with from a chosen few. We want letters from a great many more. Look in last week's paper, Jan. 27, upper right hand side, on the first page, and read "Write Us a Letter"—we need your help as one of its readers—men, women, boys and girls of all ages.

It may be you refrain from writing expressing your views for fear we will print the name of the sender. We will not print your name. From time to time we may make use of the ideas expressed, but no names will be signed.

Write us your ideas, we want to learn your views.

Chester G. French: "Send your paper to my wife Isabel French, Norway, Route 2. She has been borrowing it all over the neighborhood and I think she better have one of her own." We are glad to have her but it goes without saying we were equally glad to enter her subscription. Mr. French says he wonders just how this carting the snow off the roads is going to affect the farmers who want to do hauling should we have a little more rain also when it comes toward spring as in some places now it nearly cut through. That we can't say but we notice a lot of autoing and trucking being done on the roads as soon as they are ploughed out after each storm. Main street was a mess of deep ruts Thursday morning. after using the tractor during the forenoon on the ice a fine road was the result for all kinds of transportation.

George B. Lachance wants to put a new kick into your receiver. He has an Intelligence ad telling about rejuvenating sick and infirmed radio tubes. Better read his ad and get ready for his machine that is expected this week.

The Maine Naturalist Vol. VII, No. 4 has arrived and is crammed with things interesting to nature lovers. The geologist may find something for field work in the paper "Post-Pleistocene Clays of Maine." There are botanical notes from the Milbridge Ridge; bird stories "A Robin's Nest" and "An Unusual Concert" "Ornithological Notes from Southweston Maine;" a summary of recent publications; and breezy notes that appeal to nature students. The magazine is published quarterly at Augusta by the Maine Naturalist Company, editorial offices 22 Elm Street, Portland.

Stanley I. Perham of West Paris, proprector of the Maine Mineral Store called Monday to change his ad. If it's a Maine Mineral he has it in stock or can procure it. He is in touch with every mine operator and mineralgist of any importance in the state, so can safely stand behind his mineral classifications.

Mrs. Perley Doughty called Wednesday, to have us print a bunch of meal tickets. They are for Doughty's Restaurant in the Thayer Block at South Paris. Mr. and Mrs. Doughty opened the rooms several weeks ago and have found business good with an increase every week.

Mrs. Arthur Morrill sent us a bit of good news, Wednesday, February 1. She told about her husband spying on a robin in their dooryard during the forenoon and wished Florida friends to take notice. Now if the ground hog does his part right on Candlemas Day, we can bid goodbye to winter and pack away heavy underwear.

False teeth. Yes, we are fast learning around the office that there really is such a thing as false teeth. The other evening we met Clayton Murch on the street and he said, "Well, you can't guess what I've got in this box." No, we couldn't. "O, they are father's teeth. He forgot them when he went out after supper and telephoned for them, so here they are." The other morning, F. W. Sanborn was floating his new false teeth over his desk and on going to the sink a minute afterward, there was Murch with his teeth in hand, giving them a special bath of some sort and a short time after they were being inspected in the reflector. We believe the Advertiser Office has arrived at the false teeth age.

Regnall Dinsmore, better known as 'Reggie" dropped into the office, Tuesday, from his log camp on the shore of Lake Pennesseewassee. He said a short cut was taken by auto across the lake from his wharf to the main road which saves miles of rough traveling over rutted country trails. "Reggie" writes stories about hunting, trapping, and life in the great outdoors, so gathers "atmosphere" from the solitude of camp life miles away from urban activities. His stories appear in several of the popular magazines.

Some ads. work quickly as in the case of A. D. Kilgore of Norway. He used the Intelligence Column for the sale of sleds. Ad. appeared Thursday and the goods were sold Friday. We can't guarantee chain lightning service in all cases, but it pays to use the column. The paper is broadcast over a wide territory where many readers of the column learn a dog is lost or found; that Mr. So and So has pigs for sale and Mrs. Housekeeper wants a hired girl. Try it and see.

We have printed posters for the drama, "Captain Racket," to be given in Robinson Hall, Oxford, the evening of Feb. 7. The play was a huge success in Concert Hall last week and presented by local actors under the direction of Harold A. Anderson. The entertainment is under the auspices of the Norway Universalist Circle.

NORWAY WOMAN'S CLUB

Musical Afternoon Coming

The Norway Woman's Club will meet Tuesday afternoon, February 7th, at 2.30 o'cock at Legion Hall. This will be a musical afternoon, with both vocal and instrumental music, and a reader. There will be selections by the high school orchestra, piano selections by Miss Ada Reed, violin selections by Miss Ruth Flanders, Mrs. E. H. Carritt of Oxford will be soloist, Mrs. Esther Tower Anderson, reader, and little Miss Margaret Hill, solo dancer. A social hour will follow and tea will be served by the committee composed of Mrs. Jane Foster, Mrs. Florence Bradbury, Mrs. Elizabeth Bartlett, Mrs. Helen Bickford, Mrs. Annie Young, Mrs. Helena Nelson, Mrs. Ada Trask, Mrs. Georgia Swain, Mrs. Melvina Pride, Mrs. Elizabeth Brooks.

The "Silver Tea" held Tuesday afternoon at the Legion Hall, for the benefit of the Club, sponsored by Mrs. Helena Nelson, was a very pretty affair. The hall was made very homey with rugs, chairs and cut flowers. Tables were arranged for cards, and during the afternoon, Mrs. Nelson and her assistants served tea.

UNION SUNDAY EVENING SERVICE

Rev. Raymond Morgan was the speaker at the Union Community Service at the Methodist Episcopal Church, Sunday evening. His discourse was based on the historical setting of St. John's gospel, together with an analysis of the writings as gleaned from tradition and internal evidences found by modern scholars. Practical lessons were drawn from many parts of this book that is considered the most popular and helpful of the four gospels. Rev. John Singleton conducted the service and introduced the ministers' quartet, comprising Rev's. Allen, Joslin, Morgan, and Singleton. They may be heard again at future meetings. Services during February will be held at the Universalist Church, Rev. Pliny Allen presiding with Rev.'s Singleton and Morgan bringing the message.

The Boy Scouts will have part in the opening exercises, Sunday evening, Feb. 5, it being the eighteenth anniversary of the beginning of the organization. A crowded auditorium requiring the "standing room only" sign is desired, according to Rev. John Singleton's announcement, last Sunday night.

Representatives of the three churches will meet after the meeting next Sunday night and talk over a Church Vacation School for next summer.

Star Golden Anniversary

The Kennebunk Star observes its 50th anniversary with a 24 paged edition. Pictures are plenty and shows its home town in good shape. The Watsons are its editors and owners. It has been in the family all these years. W. Lester Watson is the head of it and with him and the boys, they produce a good local paper.

Mrs Arthur Morrill has sent some of her Cottage Cheese to Washington D. C.

I. W. Waite has bought the bunglow in which he is living on Whitman St. also the two house lots adjoining. It was bought of Chas. G. Blake.

The February Northern is a memorial edition of Garret Schenck, founder and president of the Great Northern Paper Co., who died Jan. 3, 1928, aged 74 years. It well tells the story of a busy and useful life. A successful developer of the material resources of our State.

Virgil C. Dunn is pleasantly located in Atlanta, Ga., where he went the first of the year for employment at Forest Hills, Ricker Hotel. He writes home that the work is agreeable and climate ideal.

Another American Legion dance will be held at Legion Home, Monday evening, Feb. 6. Prizes will be given away and that snappy jazz team will furnish music. These dances are drawing well and will be held every Monday night so long as the crowd gathers.

Tentative plans for the Legion's annual minstrel show are underway and something good is contemplated. Harold Moor, in charge of the show, is working for novelties and acts to at least equal former productions. One of the special features will be the Pilgrim Male Quartet of Boston. Local singers, end men and other comedians are being rounded up for rehearsals that start soon. An overture will be arranged especially for this show.

Mrs. Edna Melanson of North Waterford was in Norway, Monday, to attend the funeral of Rose B. Stone, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Stone of North Waterford.

Mrs. Freeman Frost has returned to Auburn with Mrs. George Wheeler for a short visit.

Mrs. Harriott Porter entertained the Swastika Sewing Club, Wednesday evening, February 1st. She had planned to have them the previous Wednesday, but bad weather prevented.

George Sanborn and several men from South Paris went fishing on Thompson Pond, Tuesday.

Mrs. H. A. Knightly attended the Lecturers' Conference at Augusta, last week.

Melvin "Cappy" Smith is busy topping out and cleaning chimneys.

WHO'LL WORK WITH HIS HANDS?

The schools are turning out an unlimited number of bosses, managers, directors, superintendents, foremen, go-getters, also salemen, book-keepers, clerks, etc. Meanwhile there is a shortage of people who will take hold with their hands and do work calling for muscle.

This disparity will probably increase, judging by figures given out by the National Industrial Conference Board which finds that the number of unskilled workers who returned to Europe since 1924, is three times as many as those who came thence to the United States. Perhaps many of these people were disappointed when they found they could not pick up gold in our streets.

The man with the hoe and the pick is needed. There is an equal demand for the one who can swing a carpenter's hammer, a bricklayer's trowel, or a house painter's brush. Many who practice these trades are driving shiny automobiles, while clerks and bookkeepers are walking.

Anyone should be glad to shake hands cordially with the man in overalls, and be glad to walk down town with him. The fellow who can mix paint so it will stick or who can fix the chimney so it won't smoke has practical views of life. We can all learn from him.

We should pay high respect to the farmer. As an owner of land, he has a position of substantial dignity. When we give due social honors to such people, more boys will see that these callings are desirable.

Prof. Mitchell's Review

Your current issue maintains its average of excellence. The article about Jas. Gordon Bennett is interesting. Bennett was an eccentric; he made and unmade editors according to the whim that obsessed him for the moment; but he had a way of enjoying life—which is more than some of his contemporaries were able to do, and he was able to maintain his style of living and his method of publishing to the end. If this be not success, what is it?

It is noted that Norway has numerous chimney fires. Why not publish something about individual fire protection? The only kind that can be really effective. Your costly pumper will be of little use when a fire has gained great headway before its arrival.

In "Our Competitor's Life Story" you give sage advice about returning where life's journey started. "Don't do it," is condensed wisdom. Memory paints the scenes of youth and early life with wondrous tints. A return to those scenes for brief vacations is the limit of safety. A permanent return would mean disappointment.

"Infatuations." A short article that overs much of a wide field. Infatuation! An ailment that attacks humans with deadly force in various forms and from different points.

"Dear Little House Where Nobody Lives." A few lines that tell a long story. Winnie Gray Curtis can see what many people pass with unseeing eyes. There is many a dear little house, now vacant and falling to decay, where once love, ambition and hope dwelt in unity.

Romantic notions have small space in this age of speed; but I will be glad to be told of a substitute which will bring as many fine thoughts. I have never found such while speeding for the mere purpose of going from one place to another place—at twenty cents a mile.

Chamber of Commerce. If you have one that is free from politics, its members united in search for ways and means to benefit the community rather than a few of its members, you have something unusual.

Rightful Justice. I would like to read an article by Mr. F. M. Davis, giving his thoughts and conclusions about the Hickman case, now occupying space in the daily newspapers. What would be rightful justice in this case?

Ancient Day Book. Interesting inasmuch as it gives some idea of the direction and distance we have travelled in a century. It is noted that something stronger than one-half of one per cent was sold. Yet ships were built, fine houses erected, fields tilled and inclosed with stone fences. None of these are being done in this section at this time.

Care of Baby Teeth

"Baby teeth are more important to the small child than are second teeth to the grown-ups," says The Maine State Department of Health. "The idea which so many parents have that baby teeth are not worth taking care of is entirely wrong as you will realize if you will consider the period in which the child has the use of these teeth. It scarcely seems possible and yet it is true that the normal child uses these baby teeth during the years in which he grows one-half of his entire height and one-third of his entire weight, that is during the first eight or nine years of his life. It is during this perid of growth that the child needs every available aid to make him strong and healthy for he has a hard task on his hands to obtain for himself a body and mind which will last through the strenuous and long year of adultism.

As it has been proven that good teeth are necessary for adult health, so it is that equally good teeth are necessary for child health. Baby teeth should be given just as careful daily brushings and as careful scrutiny for decay as the second teeth. The brushing should commence as soon as the child has several teeth and the regular visits to the dentist, at least once in every six months, should commence by the time the child is two years old. These two activities will assist to a large degree in preventing a widespread decay and its results.

Extensively decayed baby teeth, uncared for, are a source of infection and often the cause of much illness, and particularly are baby teeth linked with cases of malnutrition and underweight. Some cases of infected tonsils have cleared up when the baby teeth have been filled and all chances of infection from them removed. Other troubles such as indigestion, headaches tuberculosis and heart trouble have also been traced to diseased and decayed baby teeth.

Aside from the infection resulting from this decay, development and growth are stunted, too. It is necessary that food be thoroughly chewed if all of the nourishment is to be gotten from it. If the child's teeth are badly decayed, he will not chew his food upon them because of the pain from the contact of food upon the tender exposed parts of the teeth. Lack of chewing also prohibits the growth of the jaws so much so that when the larger permanent teeth come into the jaws, there is not sufficent room for them and they must overlap and crowd one another.

There are twenty baby teeth, ten in the upper jaw and ten in the lower and each one deserves minute daily care as well as dental repair. The baby teeth are even more important to the growth of the child than are the second teeth to the already secured growth of the adult.

USE HOME GROWN WOOL

If you have a small quanity of home grown wool that cannot be sold to advantage, it can be made into wool comforters. Select the cleanest of the fleece, break it into small pieces and remove any tags and dung locks. Prepare a tub of lukewarm suds made with good neutral soap and soft water. If the fleece is very greasy from 1-2 to 1-3 cup of sal-soda may be added to the tub of suds. An excess of soap or sal-soda or the use of hot water will tend to felt the wool and make it difficult to straighten out. Handle the wool as little as possible in the water. Do not use a washing machine. Put it through 3 or 4 tubs of suds if necessary and rinse in several waters. Use lukewarm water every time, and reduce the quanity of soap and sal-soda after the first bath. Dip it out of the last rinse allowing as much water as possible to drain off, and spread it thinly on clean cloth or paper to dry, preferably in the sun. Straighten it out with wool or cotton cards, which will remove the smaller bits of trash. Burrs will have to be picked out by hand. Arrange the fluffy wool after carding in an even layer between two pieces of cheesecloth, whip the edges together and tack or quilt through both cheesecloth and wool to hold the latter in place. Make a second cover of pretty washable goods such as cotton challie or sateen. The outer cover may be taken off and washed when necessary and the wool filling will last for years.

Claimed that everyone should be instructed in music, and most of our citizens have got so far that they can blow an automobile horn.

Helps For The Kitchen

Apples cooked in a syrup colored with red cinnamon candies are pleasing in appearance and flavor.

Do not add water when roasting beef or lamb. Sear the meat at a high tempreature, then reduce the heat and cook 15 or 20 minutes to the pound.

Fried pineapple is easily prepared. Simply drain the slices of canned pineapple, dip in flour, and brown slowly in butter in a frying pan.

Chopped nuts are good in almost any kind of sandwich. Combine them with raisins, dates, figs or prunes. They are good with olives, with cottage or cream cheese, and with maple or brown sugar.

Cod liver oil is not a medicine—it is a food, rich in vitamins. There are many children, and grown folks, too, who need cod liver oil to build up their general health and help prevent colds and other infections.

Ham for baking may be boiled a day or two beforehand, left standing in a cold place in the liquor in which it was cooked, reheated in this, then skinned, covered with bread crumbs and sugar, stuck with cloves and put in the oven for final browning just before dinner.

To prevent jelly from oozing out of the glass and spoiling the paraffin seal, run a knife around the edges of the jelly before pouring on the paraffin, or rotate the glass after the hot paraffin is poured on and let it run up the sides of the glass and form a tight seal.

The red color sometimes admired in devil's food cake is due to the use of more soda than is necessary to neutralize the acid in the sour milk and chocolate. This results in taking into the body more soda, or free alkali than is desirable, as one does when serving hot biscuits made yellow with an excess of soda. Too red a devil's food cake, therefore, is not good.

Home-making is more important than housekeeping, although it is usually includes housekeeping as a part of itself. "Too often" an authority on home-management says, "time and energy consumed in housekeeping have made real home making impossible." The farm wife as the business partner of the farmer, the manager of the farm home, needs time and energy to think and plan for real home making through caltivation of those qualities of mind and soul which makes her an interesting and attractive companion to her whole family.

"Well, George, here it is—!"

EVERY TOWN needs more folks like the George Middletons. Surely they have learned the secret of contentment! And their plan is so sensible and easily adopted that very few words will make it yours—

First, the Middletons operate their household on a budget. They have a definite sum of money for each department of expense.

Secondly, [and this is more important], they invest their funds carefully and wisely. Mrs. Middleton is buyer for the firm — and a mighty good one.

Mrs. Middleton is a good buyer because she knows what to buy, when to buy and where to buy. There is never any doubt in her mind.

Perhaps you have guessed the reason: Mrs. Middleton reads the ads in the newspaper, and does her weekly buying according to their advice.

That's why she so often finds opportunity to greet George with a new dress, or another piece of furniture, or a substantial deposit for their savings account.

Because she studies the ads, this lady makes their income buy more happiness. YOU can do the same with yours!

Recipes

Cut left-over meat and vegetables into uniform medium-sized pieces. Mix with an equal amount of medium cream sauce (1 cup milk, 2 tablespoons flour, 2 tablespoons butter). Season well with onion, salt, pepper, etc. (Use left-over gravy with cream sauce if possible). Cover with a thick pie crust, biscuit dough, or layer of left-over mashed potato mixed with milk (one slightly beaten egg can be added to potato if desired). Bake in a moderate oven until the crust is cooked or until browned and heated through if potato is used.

FRUIT CUP

1 cup orange sections
1 cup white grapes

If cheese is omitted, add small pieces of butter to each layer of potatoes. In order to save time of making cream sauce, a small amount of dry flour can be sprinkled over layers of potato, and milk added to cover the potatoes.

Lawrence Andrews in Mechanic Falls—Much Ice, But Little Snow—Rachel Dyer Enters Simmons College.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo F. Rollins of Wollaston, Mass., who have been spending their winter vacation at Pleasant View Farms, at East Sumner, returned home, Friday.

Lawrence Andrews is visiting friends in Mechanic Falls, for a few days, and while in the place will have the impression of his mouth taken for a set of biters.

The recent rain whittled off the snow, making it considerably icy in places, and on the low lands very good skating for the children. Much bare ground is to be seen in the fields and pastures.

Thomas Dyer has been spending a few days the past week with his cousins, Ralph and Charles Dyer.

Leland Andrews has received word that his aunt, Julia Packard, is very ill at her home in Buckfield. A trained nurse is in attendance.

Laurie Holmes is spending a few days with her sister, Helen, in Portland. She is expected to arrive home, Wednesday, and her sister will come with her for a visit.

Norman Holmes is suffering with a ringworm on his face.

Word has been received by Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Dyer that their daughter, Rachel, who is training for a nurse in a Boston Hospital, has won the scholarship in her class of thirty-four and the first of February is to enter Simmons College to take up Public Health Work.

Mrs Lynn Farrar and Helen Bonney were recent guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Corry Bonney of Buckfield.

LOVELL

CLUMSY HIKING CLUB

The women of this vicinity are very much interested in the C. H. C., or the Clumsy Hiking Club, which was organized the first of the winter. It is whispered that the object of this Club is "reduction"—in weight, of course! While other whispers say that the male citizens of the town may be persuaded, by the conduct of their wives, to vote at town meeting for the road plow.

I observed in this merry group of hikers some who were slim and others who had a little excess weight, so I don't know which conclusion to make. All joking aside, the organization of the Clumsy Hiking Club is the most interesting occurance since the establishing of the electric lights. The zeal and enthusiasm with which they enter the thing—why, one day they went hiking right after a snow storm and got all tired out tramping through the snow, but—would you believe it, every blessed one of them went the next time. Not a "Can't be did" among them.

That's the kind of women we have in the town of Lovell. And we are real proud of them, too. We only hope they will continue these jaunts as they have in the past.

Mrs. Marion Adams and Mrs Eva Lebaron entertained the whist party at No. 4 last Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hatch have gone to Portland for the rest of the winter and Irma Hodsdon, who has been working for Mrs. Hatch, has returned to her home in Stow.

Ray Harmon has gone to Sabattos to work for Harold Watson.

Ida Benson, who has been visiting her brother, Walter Benson, at the Harbor, has returned to her aunt's, Mrs. Mattie Kimball's.

Kath McAllister is visiting May Harmon.

Mrs. Perley Severance and Mrs. James Plummer visited Mrs. S. R. Andrews, Tuesday.

May Harmon and Kath McAllister spent the day, Saturday, with Mrs. Bee Severance.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Harmon and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Harmon spent the day, Sunday, with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Harmon.

Circle Met—Recent Rain Delaed Filling Ice Houses.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Twitchell and Mr. and Mrs. Ai Twitchell attended the annual church business meeting of the A. C. Church, Jan. 25, to help elect the church officers for the ensuing year.

The Oxford Fore Street Circle met with Mrs. and Miss Chestina Twitchell, Jan. 26. Only five of the many were present, but a very enjoyable time was passed by these five.

A. B. Dwinalls, who is ill, has Mrs. Lizzie McAllister working for him at this writing.

The ice crop is being harvested.

E. E. Twitchell, Herman Thurlow and Lee Dudley are helping Albert Twitchell fill Leon Twitchell's ice house. Put in 160 cakes one day, 40 more were needed, but the rain put a stop to the work so his ice house is that many short thus far.

FIRING THE FURNACE

The furnace fire should receive attention at regular intervals, not simply when the house becomes too cold or too hot. No definite rule can be given that will apply to all heating systems, but the essential in fuel economy is a careful study of the system one has, the kind of fuel used, the management of the drafts and dampers. A fire should not be shaken down more than three times a day. Generally twice will be found sufficient, in the morning and in the late afternoon. Take care not to shake too much. Never leave ashes under the grate in the ash pit. In mild weather an accumulation of ashes may remain on the grate to prevent the fire from becoming too hot but in cold weather they must be removed so that a bright fire will result.

THE "MARKED BILL" GAME

This is one of the oldest methods by which restaurant cashiers are robbed but as new cashiers are constantly being employed, it is still a favorite with many crooks.

Two men enter at different times and sit at different tables. When the first leaves he pays his check with a ten dollar bill which perhaps bears certain initials on the face. The second customer waits few minutes then pays his bill with a one dollar note. When change is given, he insists that he proffered a ten dollar note instead of a one, and laughingly agrees to identify it by his initials in indelible pencil.

When such proof the usual novice feels that the additional change must be given, thus supplying the hungry pair with enough money for several meals.

It is claimed the American home is breaking down. It is surely in danger of doing so if they dance the modern dances on the parlor floor.

Malnutrition

What is malnutrition?

Malnutrition is a term applied to a condition of general subnormality in children. It is the physical condition of children who are not developing properly. School physicians and nurses have found that at least 20 per cent. of the school children in this country are in this class. It is a condition which appears in all races and in all classes. The children of wealthy parents, many times are just as malnourished as the poor children.

What are the causes?

The causes of malnutrition vary a great deal. We will divide them into five groups Inheritance, past illness, present defects or disease, bad hygiene and improper food, social factors and environment.

Inheritance. In some cases inheritance plays an important part in the malnutrition of children. Small size and frailness may be inherited from the parents, but these cases are in the minority. No parents of a malnourished child should be satisfied to accept this as the cause of the condition without first trying some good treatment to correct the condition.

Past illness. If the baby does not get a good start in life, he may be handicapped all through his childhood. Severe illness in early childhood may cause a loss of weight which is recovered very slowly.

Present defects of disease. These can be detected only by a complete medical examination by a physician. The defects most commonly noticed in malnourished children are decayed teeth, very large tonsils, poor skin, bad posture, flat foot, eye strain, obstructed breathing and heart trouble. In almost every case a doctor can correct these defects after which the child shows a rapid gain. The disease found most often in malnourished children is tuberculosis. This does not mean tuberculosis of the lungs only, but it includes the bones and other organs. If children who have tuberculosis have proper treatment at an early stage of the disease they can generally be built up so that the disease is practically cured.

Bad hygiene and improper food. The children who suffer from this cause belong not only to the poor class but to the richer class as well. Insufficient food is one of the most common causes. This may be due to poverty or bad buying but it is most often traced back to improper training of parents about the foods that children need. Improper food falls in this class too. Parents who allow their children to have rich foods, pickles, sweets, in other words everything that they want, are in many cases, keeping their child malnourished. In this class too, comes the poor eating habits, constipation, insufficient sleep and lack of fresh air. Any of these causes can be readily eliminated if only the mother will do her share to stop them.

Social factors. Under this comes the insufficient income, unintelligent buying and the personality of the parents. It has been found that the personality of the parents and the atmosphere of the home plays an important part in the health of the child.

What are the symptoms? The symptoms vary with the child. In some cases the parents may think that the child is healthy and well nourished but nevertheless he may be suffering from malnutrition. Let us consider some of the indications:

1. Relation of height, weight and age. (This of course is found by checking with the standard charts which physicians and child clinics have, underweight and overweight.)
2. General appearance. Lack of color and a tired appearance.
3. Lack of pep.
4. Bad posture.
5. Lack of interest in the things that are happening in the home, school, etc.
6. Poor appetite.

Treatment.

The treatment for malnutrition varies with the individual child. Some need a physician's care while others may need only the mother's careful supervision. However, since one cannot always tell how severe the condition may be it is wiser to consult a physician if the child shows any signs of malnutrition. Therefore, the first step to take for the child is to have an examination. This should include accurate measuring and weighing and a comparison of the results with a standard chart. If any defects are found in the physical condition of the child they should be corrected at this time for they tend to retard the growth of a child even though the best of care is given him.

Provide plenty of the proper kind of food. Provide a simple mid-morning meal of cracker and milk or cereal and milk. If the child is at school, make arrangements with the teacher to have him eat it at school. Always provide a hot dish for the school lunch.

Rest is equally as important as food for the malnourished child. Do not let him get overtired. Twelve hours of sleep at night with rest periods during the day if the condition is serious.

Dress the child warmly and keep him well protected during the cold weather. He needs all the energy from his food supply for his body and should not use it up to keep the body warm.

Keep the child from getting the various diseases if possible. They retard the growth and use up the energy and vitality of the child.

MODEL POULTRY FARM

While California claims to be the poultry center of the United States and supports its claim by stupendous figures as to the number of broilers raised and eggs laid throughout the year, it is also a fact that there are many large poultry farms in New England as well as in other parts of the United States.

One of the largest model farms is being operated under the supervision of the University of Maine at West Winterport, working in co-operation with the Central Maine Power Company. During the present season. over 25,000 chickens have been raised, and approximately 2,000 laying hens are kept during the season.

At the present time, this farm has two standard types of incubators—one heated by coal and one by fuel oil, and both fitted with electrically operated circulating fans to keep the air in circulation at all times. The poultry houses are electrically lighted according to the latest approved methods to give working time to the hens during the winter.

A 12,000 egg capacity incubator of the most modern type, heated by electricity, will soon be installed. Other electrical equipment consists of a 5 HP portable motor for general use, including sawing wood, hoisting, grinding and feed mixing. This last item is particularly important as approximately 100 tons of feed are used each year.

During the winter the drinking water is heated by electric water heaters of the immersion type. To combat disease, ultra violet ray equipment will be installed for the treatment of both chickens and hens. All water on the farm is pumped by automatically operated electric pumps.

UP-TO-DATE RETALIATION

Gentleman having wives who make a practice of cutting corns, sharpening lead pencils and clipping recipes from magazines with favorite razors, will find a quick and sure cure in the following:

When next requested to shave wifie's neck see to it that the razor most imposed upon is used. No more conclusive proof can be furnished a loving wife, than this.

Swivel Chair Farm Notes

Every lot or field in which hogs are kept should be supplied with running water, or a system should be installed whereby water is available whenever they want it. Many hogs get their supply from a dirty trough filled once or twice a day. This is inadequate and unsanitary.

The greatest source of bacterial contamination of milk in both summer and winter is improperly washed and sterilized utensils. The dairyman who is desirous of producing clean milk, or milk with a low bacteria count, should see that all equipment with which milk comes in contact is washed with clean water and washing powder (not soap), rinsed with clean water, and then scalded with boiling water or steamed.

Cows normally lose flesh for three or four weeks after calving because they can not consume sufficient feed to provide adequately for both the milk flow and maintenance of body weight. It is important that the cow carry considerable flesh at time of calving to prevent undue thinness afterward. Cows in good condition at birth of calf will start off the lactation period at a higher level of production than thin cows. This results in a larger yield of milk for the year. There is no economy in having a cow thin at calving time.

Practically every farm pest has its bird enemies. For example, one serious agricultural pest freely eaten by birds is the wheat aphis, or green bug. On a 200-acre farm in North Carolina, where wheat, rye and oats were severely attacked by green bugs, it was found that birds were very effective in destroying the pests. The outbreak was at its height during the migration season of such birds as the goldfinch and the vesper and chipping sparrows, which with other species on the farm numbered more than 3,000 individuals. It was estimated that these birds were destroying green bugs at the rate of nearly a million a day, and on days when additional flocks of migrants were present this destruction was increased correspondingly. During the season so many birds flocked to the grainfields that the aphis infestation was reduced by an incalculable number.

About two-thirds of all animals slaughtered for food in the United States are federally inspected, a large proportion of meat establishments doing an inter-state business, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Federal inspection of animals is made before and at the time of slaughter.

An animal that looks sick or abnormal in any other way, is tagged with a metal label fastened to the ear, reading either "U. S. Condemned" or "U. S. Suspect," depending on the ailment. If condemned, the animals so tagged must not be taken into the slaughter room. Animals of merely doubtful condition are kept apart and slaughtered separately.

The present export trade in American meats is possible largely because the Federal inspection system enjoys the confidence of foreign governments.

As soon as you discover scours, put the calves in individual pens. Prevent their contact with one another. Calf scours often produces serious results. It commonly affects calves that are from a few hours to two weeks old. It may end fatally in from 24 to 48 hours. See that the pens you put the calves in have plenty of sunlight, and are kept clean—and with plenty of dry bedding.

The horse that has a good temperament has big, mild, bright eyes. His head's wide between the ears. He obeys commands readily, and has an alert, graceful carriage when he's moving.

A simple way to prevent horn growth is to rub slightly moistened caustic soda or potash 3 or 4 times alternately on the undeveloped horns when the calves are 4 to 10 days old. Allow the caustic to dry each time before applying to the next. You can get the caustic at any drug store. It comes in sticks about the size of a lead pencil.

Calcium cyanide, a poison that generates hydrocyanic-acid gas when it comes in contact with the air, is generally used in fumigating groundhog burrows. Take a heaping tablespoonful of the calcium cyanide (use a long-handled spoon), reach into the burrow at arm's length, turn the spoon over, and deposit the cyanide in a pile in the burrow, but do not scatter it. Then cut a square of sod, lay the flat side against the burrow opening, and throw a few shovelfuls of dirt over the sod to prevent escape of the poisonous gas generated by the calcium cyanide. Treat all holes in this way. Check the work a week after treatment and when any holes are found that have been opened, repeat the treatment. Use calcium cyanide only in burrows occupied by groundhogs during April, May, June and July when the animals are most active. Never keep the poison in a glass jar and do not leave the can open. Don't keep the calcium cyanide in any building housing either human beings or livestock. It is a very dangerous poison.

Some helpful washing devices are on the market in addition to various types of washing machines. When for any reason it is not possible to install a machine, considerable assistance may be obtained from some of these devices, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. One is a perforated funnel made to fit in a wash boiler. This works on the same principle as a coffee percolator and increases the circulation of water through the clothes. The funnel-on-a-stick type of washer, which was the fore-runner of the vacuum-cup washing machine, makes it possible to wash very soiled or infected clothing without immersing the hands. The stick can also be used to lift the wet clothes from the boiler to the tub, although a smooth broom stick is equally satisfactory. What might be termed "portable washers" are also available. One such type is a pump operated by an electric motor which maintains the circulation of water in the tub and keeps the clothes in motion. Another consists of a set of inverted cones which act on the vacuum principle mentioned above. This can be fastened to the tub and operated by hand or motor. All of these devices are improvements over the washboard.

The necessity for selecting the right food for children is being emphasized because in the midst of plenty, thousands of American children are not getting the foods they need for the highest development of mind and body. The United States has more food and better food than any other nation. Our pure food laws and sanitary methods of handling food supplies are world famous. Along with our efforts to safeguard health through food control, however, we need to develop better food habits and so reduce our alarmingly high percentage of malnutrition. For the undernourished child does not have a fair start, and every thing is harder for him. Even though his body may outgrow some of the visible signs of malnutrition, others not so apparent remain. His resistance is likely to be lowered so that he "catches" diseases easily. Faulty mental habits cling and in countless other ways he carries a handicap all through life.

Hard boiled eggs are sometimes used to garnish fish in a colorful way. Garnishes that can be eaten are to be preferred for economy's sake.

The slices of lemon usually served as a garnish with fish whether it is broiled, fried, or baked, are not merely a decoration. They are meant to furnish the lemon-juice which makes the fish more appetizing, and incidentally to increase the supply of vitamin C in the meal. Many people prefer to pass the lemon separately rather than to garnish the platter with it. The slices of lemon are especially attractive if sprinkled with chopped parsley.

The beneficial effect of sunlight is not obtained unless the rays reach the skin directly. Clothing or window glass keep out the ultra-violet rays. It is only when the skin begins to be tanned that any benefit may be expected. Sun baths in the direct sunlight are the simplest method of giving the baby enough ultra-violet light. Of course each mother must use discretion, and begin by exposing her child gradually, for short periods, and keep him protected from the wind.

Left-over cooked foods need special care in summer. Moist cooked foods, particularly those made with milk, eggs, meat or fish, are excellent breeding places for harmful micro-organisms, including those that cause serious poisoning, without making the food smell or taste spoiled. Left-overs of meat pies dishes made with cream sauce, gravies, custards, boiled or cream salad dressing, must be carefully handled and should be used promptly. In hot weather left-overs should be boiled or thoroughly heated before being served again.

There is practically no advantage in adding water to the grain ration, because of the large amount of saliva and other digestive fluids secreted by a dairy cow.

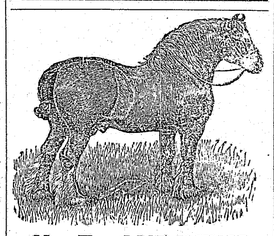

With the increase in aviation the new service of the Weather Bureau in furnishing weather data for flyers at 8.15 a. m. each day, is highly important to those in the work. The weather reports at 8.00 a. m. are broadcast on three wave lengths, so that aviators can get them much sooner than the ordinary weather reports, which are entered on the weather maps in public places about 9.30 a. m.

SUSIE'S KITCHEN KABINET

Kitchen utensils were instruments that produced music for the novelty concert at American Legion Hall, Thursday evening and successfully repeated, Tuesday evening of this week. The show was amusing, snappy and unique, with enough variety to keep the audience alert and asking for more.

Mrs. Helen J. Denison was marshal in the opening parade, which featured some twenty-five Kitchen Kabinet musicians, carrying strainers, peelers, mashers, funnels, grinders, egg beaters, etc.

After the overture, Mrs. Ada Trask as the gray-haired grandmother, presided at the family album and brought from the ancient storehouse a large collection of songs, popular many years ago, and the old standby's of today.

As the titles were announced, the songs were either enacted in pantomime, presented with tableaux or given as vocal and instrumental solos. The kitchen band as an ensemble, played many selections after the announcements, while soloists featured floor mops and other articles representing expensive instruments. A pair of cake tins made a good accordeon and fry pans were converted into ukes. A pretty good fiddle was made with gem pans strung to fit the occasion.

The automobile was not forgotten and Mrs. Mary Bicknell did her stuff with a miniature car during her song, "Yes, Ma'am, That's My Flivver." Miss Madelyn Hayden performed on a make-shift violin and gave a dancing act that won several encores. All parts were done to a finish and proclaimed a bunch of clever people in the cast.

In appreciation of the masterly efforts, the artists were presented carrots, cabbages, radishes and other vegetables procurable at this season.

The entertainment was presented by the Legion Auxiliary and proved the big hit for the winter.

Old-time Yankee Whittling Trick Locally Recalled

It Gave Our Grandfathers Time To "Set" And To "Think," Sometimes

The recent statement of President Coolidge that after he retires from his Washington experiences he may decide "to come back to his old Vermont home and whittle," has roused much interest in this old-time, familiar Yankee pastime. It may have speeded up the setting out of a large quantity of new trees in the Coolidge forest, in order to be sure to provide ample material for the ex-presidential knife when it arrives. It may also have inspired the interesting chapter in the Wheelock town reminiscences of Principal Ozias D. Mathewson of Lyndon Institute as printed in the current issue of the Lyndonville Union-Journal on the subject "Whittling" in which he says:

"Up in this neck of the woods some men used to whittle and 'set and think' while others just whittled and 'set.' Whittling was at its best when white pine and old growth cedar were plentiful although now and then an old fellow preferred bass wood.

"The men who congregated at the mill and store and set on the piazzas were often whittling. It was interesting to watch them busily at work, often in silence. If you asked one, 'What are you making, Had? 'Nuthing.' 'What are you thinking about?' 'Nuthin perticular.' As a rule whittling did not stimulate conversation but rather meditation, rumination and expectoration followed by a solemn stroking of the beard.

"The mill and store stood on opposite sides of the streets, The store faced the west so it was a good place mornings to whittle in the shade, while the mill provided the same comfort afternoons. At each place was a row of non-descript chairs and boxes. Some of the chairs once had splint bottoms which had been replaced by pine boards from some dry goods box, others were old kitchen chairs minus the backs. These were supplemented by a goodly assortment of boxes in which had come Ayer's Hair Vigor, Cherry Pectoral, Hoy't Balsam or Hostetter's Bitters. All the chairs and boxes were curiously cut and carved by jack knives. Usually there was no particular design. They were just whittled in such a way as to indicate the thinking of the whittler.

"Now and then one tried to make something such as a tooth pick and sat and picked his teeth and chewed it while he reflected upon the problems of life from that angle. Another made plugs for lead pipes of different sizes, not because he had any pipes to plug but just to see how round he could whittle a piece of cedar. He evidently took a real pleasure in this, for he showed his plugs and boasted of them to his fellow whittlers. One man was "uncommon handy" with his jack knife and used to make sugar paddles of white maple which he beautified with some fancy work on the handle. His paddles were in great demand among the girls, who gilded them, and tieing a blue ribbon about the haudle, hung them up as a souvenir—of what? He also used to make tiny ox yokes of basswood fully equipped with bows and ring. These he gave to boys and girls to whom he was especially partial.

"Not only could this old man whittle but while he worked he talked and told many stories. He had an endless number of them which he told with an air that seemed to make the biggest of them real. He always gave the time, locality and persons in telling his stories together with a mass of interesting detail. The boys liked to ask him a few days after he had told one of his big stories, 'Say who'nd you say it was that stood on his head on the ridge pole at a barn rising? He could always tell and in doing so probably was reminded of another story involving the same man or his brother. His stories stood the test.

"Once in desperation the storekeeper drove some tacks into the edges of the boards forming the chair bottoms. This did little good for the whittlers usually had a knife with a broken blade which they used to pull out the tacks. Occasionally a tack head pulled off leaving enough of the tack to dull the knife.

"Today whittling is fast becoming one of the lost arts. One seldom sees a boy whittling just for fun. He no longer take pride in having a Jonathan Croke knife with an edge like a razor. He is too busy to whittle. Oh! to be sure he feels he must have his initials cut on a fence or somewhere about the barn if not on his desk at school.

It may be our grandfathers formed the whittling habit while attending school and sitting on the plank benches then in use. It seems quite plausible that here they learn to whittle and "set" and today we have some of their descendants in school who just 'set'—and ruminate on Wrigley."

The above was sent by a disciple of the Norway Weary Whittlers who lived in Vermont. It is an accurate picture of common occurrance of half a century or more ago. We recall just such scenes at Meredith Center, N. H. sixty-five years ago. Also in Buckfield and other places since we lived in this county—Editor.

"Taxes" Who Should Pay Them?

A Real Case of Need Where Attention is Needed at Once

Picture to yourself a house where a man, his wife and five children, from two to eleven years old, also his father live. This man is known to be a hard-working man. He lived by cutting wood from a considerable tract of cut over land, and selling it in the villagees. The house is a low, old fashioned farm house with doors in the middle, all out of repair and there is not a whole window in the house. Some of the windows are without any glass whatever. Some places where doors and windows should be, are entirely open.

A few years ago this man built a new house. Not a palace but a comfortable one for himself and family. Unfortunately this house burned up with the most of its contents and no insurance. Then it was a case of going back to the old shack. I understand that he has never called on the town but that in two instances the town fathers have, unsolicited, paid a bill. Once a Doctor's bill just a short time before election. Also that the taxes on his poor property have been increased until over $90.00 per year is now assessed. Now with four years taxes unpaid they presume to evict him from the premises. How is that gentleman? Confiscate property for four years taxes.

Are these men wise, even from a purely selfish standpoint?

From the amount of tax assessed against this property it would seem that it was taxed for $2,000.00 or more. I doubt very seriously if this property would sell for $2,000.00. I wonder if all property of this class in town is taxed for all, or more than it cost or would bring in the open market? Would the inhabitants of this town uphold its selectmen in evicting this family from this poor shelter and making paupers of them to be support by the town? I wonder if there is justice or reason or good business in this to leave out of the question all considerations of mercy, or charity or human kindness?

I believe that the inhabitants of this vicinity, like myself would be very sorry to see this man and family set out in the snow. I believe they would rather chip in and put some windows in that house and make it a suitable place for human beings to live in. Were this man slothful, lazy or indifferent, the case would have an entirely different aspect.

How many men that advocate the reduction of taxes upon our great railroad systems to the extent of $300,000.00 to $500,000.00 per year would think it just to tax this shack and some cut over woodland that is seven to ten miles from market $90.00 per year?

I hope the selectmen of this particular town will carefully consider whether it would not be better not to take the bread away from this family. Would it not be better to abate these taxes? Then suppose you chip in and put some windows in that house. I believe all concerned would be better off to do a little something to help this man that is having the toughest struggle to make a living, than they will to collect what I believe to be unjust taxes—R. L. Cummings, West Paris Me. January 17th, 1928.

Slippery Travelling—Fine Supper Served—Stanley Hamlin in Sweden—Holts Visit Mrs. Riggs.

W. W. Abbott is recovering from an ill turn on Thursday morning. Is able to be out now.

No school on Wednesday due to the heavy rain in the morning and high wind. Again we have very slippery traveling.

Mrs. Frank Shaw is spending a time with her sister, Mrs. Fannie Green. Mrs. Shaw is somewhat improved since coming there.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Bell were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robbins Plummer on Thursday.

Richard Sanborn is gaining rapidly since his return from the hospital. Hopes to be out of doors soon.

The supper and movies on Wednesday night were well attended. The skies became clear early in the day but a heavy wind was in action and at five o'clock E. L. Stone and Percy Kimball of Waterford were called to our village to find the cause of the lighting system not working. They found wires crossed, fixed them as they supposed. In less than an hour all lights were out again. The second trip made them fine. The supper was begun with kerosene lamps which Henry Haynes and kind neighbors brought. Before the supper was finished they came back on. A very fine supper was served by Mrs. W. C. Goodwin, Mrs. Horace Skinner and Mrs. Chas. Kimball. A one reel picture, "Visiting Ireland," it was a comedy, came first, followed by "Wild Horse Mesa" by Zane Grey, both were good. Mr. Bull played the piano during the picture and led community singing between reels.

Religious school in the school rooms on Saturday was well attended. Next Saturday it is to be held in the Grange Hall at the same time.

Stanley Hamlin is visiting his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Moulton, in Sweden.

Word has been received from Mrs. Perry and Mrs. Sargent that they are getting through the winter so far very well. Friends are glad to hear the report.

Chas. Chaplin and Clinton Fletcher were on upper Blackguard to the George Kimball farm for hay for W. W. Abbott on Friday. They had to break their own road. They, no doubt, could make it easier on runners than in an auto in the summer.

Richard Brown had an ill turn at George Stevens' in East Waterford, recently. Richard's father brought him to his grandmother's, Mrs. Harriet Brown's. He is able to be out now.

Prentiss Kimball is in very poor health.

Mildred Haynes and Annie Gardner are fine helpers for their mothers. They are taking a hand at caring for the baby and giving "mother" a chance to get out to various social affairs. Helping someone is a very happy game to play.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Holt of North Waterford were Sunday guests of his aunt, Mrs. Ida B. Riggs. They came in their auto.

Will Green and Charles Nelson are laying a new floor in the kitchen of Miss Moore's house.

The lantern slides and lecture given by Rv. A. C. Townsend on Sunday evening in the Grange Hall was very fine. The pictures of Maine scenery, churches, lighthouses, etc., were lovely. Robert Sanderson, Mrs. Minnie Sanderson and Miss Carrie Plummer came to bring Mr. Townsend with his paraphernalia which he planned to draw the mile on a sled.

Mr. Knightly's oil truck from the village had some difficulty in climbing the hill near C. D. Morse's to deliver gas and oil to their filling station at the top of the hill, Sunday. However, help soon arrived and with a little assistance, the truck pulled gallantly up on its own power.

ANNOUNCEMENT

For two sessions, I have been a member of the House of Representatives of the Maine Legislature. It has been a custom in our state for persons with such service to be given a term or so in the Senate. It is my ambition to represent the people of Oxford County as their Senator at the next session.

My interest, not only in my town and Oxford County, but in the state at large, is well known. If given a chance to represent Oxford County in the Senate, I shall exercise the same watchful care in regard to the interests of my constituents. I favor the conservation of Maine's resources, the development of the state, not only its summer business and its manufacturing enterprises, but our farming sections as well. I am for the enforcement of the laws and for Maine's time honored policy.

I shall be a candidate before the Republican Primaries in June. If nominated and elected, I shall stand for the policies of the Party, for economy as represented in wise expenditure and shall lose no opportunity to do whatever I can in the interests of agriculture, education, and the general up-building of our state for the welfare of our people. Mormon Flees as Woman Accepts Him, Writes John Quill

Over to the eastward, midway between Maine's two big rivers, the Kennebec and the Penobscot there is a little country village, typical of New England. The little cluster of houses; the well kept farms; the little village store or stores; the garage, formerly the old fashioned blacksmith shop; the village green; the hotel with the broad veranda; the grange hall and the little church on the hill; all this and more make up the village. Every year, for years, there has been a religious sect or flock of Mormons who come from the surrounding country and canvass the town for converts. They are dressed in peculiar manner, long frock coats, flat hats white chokers and all the fixings. They used to come once a year.

One spring they blew into town, laid out the trip and started out to make a personal canvass. One long, thin specimen came along the road where two maiden ladies lived. Eyeing the house he turned and walked up the grand walk, bordered by old fashioned flowers. One of the ladies was at the window, doing her weekly darning. She had lived in the old square house for years and years, ever since she was a child. She had grown old in years but not in mind. She was just as young as she was when she used to make life a long sweet song for the school teacher. When she saw her visitor approaching and heard the knock on the door she went along in her brisk way, opened the door wide. Quickly the visitor made a very low bow and in a voice any tragedician would have proudly used he said, "Behold the bridegroom cometh." She gave one look, put on a broad smile and said, "Good Lord, where have you been all these years. I have been waiting for you for full 20 years. Come in. I thought you were never coming."

Her visitor gasped twice and he sounded like a pump running down. He dropped his bundle of tricks on the stone steps, refused the outstretched hand, turned on his heel and down the walk he flew. Never a parting glance until he had gotten a good safe distance from the house. Then he lingered long enough to catch his breath and hurried along to warn his companions.

At the house the door remained open. The single occupant sat flat on the bottom stair in the hall convulsed with laughter. When her sister returned later she tried to get some intelligent explanation of the cause of all this hilarity. It was no use. She gave it up. It was hours after, before her sister could control herself so as to give her questioner a lucid explanation of just what had taken place. And her sister said for nights and nights while others were sleeping the sleep of the just she would be awakened in the small hours by having her sister laugh and say, "Oh, Mary I do wish you could have seen him go. He took this for the sanatorium and me for the star border." The little group of convert hunters have visited the town several times since one of their number made his mad dash for liberty, but they never call at that house any more. They have sped the story so it has run like a prairie fire. Even a book agent with a check like that of a government mule, gives the house a wide berth and passes by on the other side.

The story has been told and retold at the weekly sewing circle or scandal club by the author of all the mischief whose only comment was that the only lover she ever had was lost forever and she was going to take a correspondence school course in love making, and the road to prosperity and success was a one way road.—John Quill, in the Kennebec Journal.

Lena H. Farrar: "Occasionally there appears in the columns of your paper. Some references to Christian Science which conveys the impression that it teaches that sickness is simply a matter of the imagination. The writer has all of the writings of Mary Barker Eddy, the discoverer and founder of Christian Science, and has read them all. She has never been able to find anything in these writings that would lead one to think that Mrs. Eddy believes sickness or any phase of suffering to be matters of imagination. Through all her writings there runs a gentle appeal to turn to the pure, spiritual teachings of the Bible and become acquainted with God. She calls attention to the fact that Jesus has plainly taught what the will of God is, and that all must come to know and do his will. Did not Jesus say that if we believed in him, we should do the same and even greater works than he? Did he not give us a new commandment to love one another as he loved us? Are we doing the works which he did, and greater works, are we loving as he loved? If not, then we are certainly not doing the will of God. All of Mrs. Eddy's writings are so fragrant with beauty and truth, that it seems a sacrilege to take a single sentence from out its own lovely setting and use it as a quotation, so I shall simply hope that all may come to know what Christian Science really is. Most of the opposition is to a false concept of Christian Science, not to what it really is. Also most all criticism is, not criticism of Christian Science, but of a mistaken idea about it. When we come to study the Bible with an earnest desire to learn how to love as Jesus loved, we shall cease to criticise, condemn, or judge one another, and shall find true joy in expressing the warmth and tenderness of God's gracious love, which always comforts, blesses and heals."

IN "FLU" TIME EAT FRUIT

During a recent influenza epidemic, it was claimed that the more alkaline the blood, the less danger there was of contracting the disease.

It is a fact, unfortunately not well known, that we must keep our systems alkaline in order to retain health. Fresh vegetables, milk and fruits are the great alkaline foods. Bread, meat and fish are acid-producers. Natually we insist upon eating these staples, but we should see to it that enough of the other foods are eaten so that the acidity of the acid-producers be offset.

An orange for breakfast, the liberal use of spinach, lettuce, celery, lima beans and such vegetables, and a fruit salad or a vegetable-fruit salad for the big meal of the day will be found very desirable.

When colds threaten, drink lemonade more liberally than ever, for lemons, like oranges, have a particularly strong alkaline reaction.

The married women looks so young in their short dresses now, that the truant officers will be coming around soon to see why they are not in school.

Mormon Flees as Woman Accepts Him, Writes John Quill

Over to the eastward, midway between Maine's two big rivers, the Kennebec and the Penobscot there is a little country village, typical of New England. The little cluster of houses; the well kept farms; the little village store or stores; the garage, formerly the old fashioned blacksmith shop; the village green; the hotel with the broad veranda; the grange hall and the little church on the hill; all this and more make up the village. Every year, for years, there has been a religious sect or flock of Mormons who come from the surrounding country and canvass the town for converts. They are dressed in peculiar manner, long frock coats, flat hats white chokers and all the fixings. They used to come once a year.

One spring they blew into town, laid out the trip and started out to make a personal canvass. One long, thin specimen came along the road where two maiden ladies lived. Eyeing the house he turned and walked up the grand walk, bordered by old fashioned flowers. One of the ladies was at the window, doing her weekly darning. She had lived in the old square house for years and years, ever since she was a child. She had grown old in years but not in mind. She was just as young as she was when she used to make life a long sweet song for the school teacher. When she saw her visitor approaching and heard the knock on the door she went along in her brisk way, opened the door wide. Quickly the visitor made a very low bow and in a voice any tragedician would have proudly used he said, "Behold the bridegroom cometh." She gave one look, put on a broad smile and said, "Good Lord, where have you been all these years. I have been waiting for you for full 20 years. Come in. I thought you were never coming."

Her visitor gasped twice and he sounded like a pump running down. He dropped his bundle of tricks on the stone steps, refused the outstretched hand, turned on his heel and down the walk he flew. Never a parting glance until he had gotten a good safe distance from the house. Then he lingered long enough to catch his breath and hurried along to warn his companions.

At the house the door remained open. The single occupant sat flat on the bottom stair in the hall convulsed with laughter. When her sister returned later she tried to get some intelligent explanation of the cause of all this hilarity. It was no use. She gave it up. It was hours after, before her sister could control herself so as to give her questioner a lucid explanation of just what had taken place. And her sister said for nights and nights while others were sleeping the sleep of the just she would be awakened in the small hours by having her sister laugh and say, "Oh, Mary I do wish you could have seen him go. He took this for the sanatorium and me for the star border." The little group of convert hunters have visited the town several times since one of their number made his mad dash for liberty, but they never call at that house any more. They have sped the story so it has run like a prairie fire. Even a book agent with a cheek like that of a government mule, gives the house a wide berth and passes by on the other side.

The story has been told and retold at the weekly sewing circle or scandal club by the author of all the mischief whose only comment was that the only lover she ever had was lost forever and she was going to take a correspondence school course in love making, and the road to prosperity and success was a one way road.—John Quill, in the Kennebec Journal.

FARM MANAGEMENT MEETINGS

According to information received from Donald W. Reed, farm management specialist of the extension service, who is to assist County Agent Donald H. Ridley at the first of the seven farm management meetings, 36 lantern slides of pictures taken on the 58 farms where labor income was doubled in five years will be shown and discussed and charts will be used.

The farm management meetings held in this county last year were very successful, as shown by the large attendance. They have proven interesting in all counties.

Following the showing of slides, there will be an opportunity to discuss local farm problems and make an analysis of the farm business to determine where the "leaks" are. It is expected this feature of the meetings will prove very valuable.

Complete plans have been made for the meetings, which are to be all day sessions beginning at 10 A. M., and ending at about 3:30 o'clock. Committees have been in charge of local arrangements. Meetings are scheduled as follows:

Tuesday, Feb. 14, Hiram, K. P. Hall, J. M. Moore in charge of local plans.

Thursday, Feb. 16, Buckfield Grange Hall, C. A. Allen in charge.

JESUS MISUNDERSTOOD AND OPPOSED.

LESSON TEXT—Mark 3:19-35; 6:1-6.
GOLDEN TEXT—He came unto his own and his own received him not. but as many as received him to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Friends Misunderstand Jesus.
JUNIOR TOPIC—Friends Misunderstand Jesus.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Facing Unavoidable Opposition
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Misunderstood Jesus.

I. Jesus Misunderstood by His Friends (3:19-21).

A. The occasion (vv. 19, 20).

A series of important events in the ministry of Jesus had followed each other in rapid succession. The twelve had been chosen, and He with His disciples had just returned from a trip of preaching and healing in Galilee. Such great interest was aroused that though Jesus was weary and hungry He did not have time to eat.

2. What His friends purposed to do (v. 21). They went out to lay hold on Him. They saw Him giving Himself with absolute abandon to His work so they attempted to rescue Him forcibly by taking Him from His work.

3. What they said (v. 21). "He is beside himself." His passionate devotion to saving the lost seemed to them a kind of insanity.

II. Jesus Opposed by the Scribes (vv. 22-30).

1. Their charge (v. 22). They charged Him with casting out demons by Beelzebub. According to Matthew 12:22-24, the Pharisees joined the scribes in this charge. The occasion which provoked the charge was the healing of a man possessed with a demon. Unable to explain His unwearying service for needy men by attributing His zeal to religious frenzy, they accused Him of being in league with the devil.

2. Christ's reply (vv. 23-27). He exposed their folly by a question and by parables.

(1) "How can Satan cast out Satan?" If after Satan gets control of a man he should voluntarily relinquish that hold he would thus become his own enemy. In view of the nature of the devil, this is unthinkable.

(2) "If a kingdom be divided against itself that kingdom cannot stand (v. 24). Civil war is national suicide. A living example of this folly is seen in China today.

(3) If a house be divided against itself, that house cannot stand (v. 25). House here means family. The family that wars against itself will surely perish.

(4) No man can enter into a strong man's house and spoil his goods except he first bind the strong man (v. 27). Satan here is the strong man, the house is the world, the goods of the house are the human beings whose welfare and happiness Satan is seeking to destroy.

3. Christ's charge (vv. 28-30).

Since He was doing the works of God (for before their very eyes He had driven the demon from the man) He was undoing the works of the devil. He went about doing good. Wherever He went men were blessed. The eyes of the blind were opened deaf ears were unstopped, the lame were made to walk and the dead were raised. Having with unanswerable logic met their accusations He charged home upon them most awful guilt, that of blasphemy against the Holy Ghost. Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost is attributing the works of the Spirit to the devil. For this great sin there is no pardon.

III. Jesus Misunderstood by His Family (vv. 31-35).

His brothers and mother came with the object of getting Him home because they thought He had lost His reason. Of course His brothers did not believe on Him as the Messiah, but their filial interest moved them to try to get Him home. No doubt this was most painful to Jesus. Their motive may have been right, but they were used of the devil to hinder Him.

IV. Jesus Misunderstood by His Fellow Townsmen (6:1-6).

The citizens of Nazareth were unable to question the reality of Christ's work and the power of His words, but because He was one of them they were offended at Him. This is a marvelous example of the blighting effects of prejudice. Because of this attitude of soul on the part of the people His wonder working was very limited among them. And He marveled because of their unbelief.

Vanity

Vanity of vanities saith the preacher; all is vanity. And moreover, because the preacher was wise, he still taught the people knowledge; yea, he gave good heed, and sought out, and set in order many proverbs.—Ecclesiastes 12:8-9.

SUMNER

Items Which Interest—Recent Delays by Storms—Town News.

Waterford, the Beautiful, by John Quill, in December 23rd issue of the Advertiser, appeals to me as one of the most interesting articles that I have ever read in a newspaper, and I wish to say that if Mr. Quill is not a book writer or author, or a steady writer for the large magazines, where there is an immense income headed his way, may I be so bold as to say it seems to me that John Quill has missed his calling, for there is a fortune awaiting the writer who so easily wields his pen as does John Quill. And how fortunate are the readers of the Advertiser in being favored with the opportunity of reading some of the works of this able writer.

Elliot Newell's large, handsome team, with Guy Bowker as teamster, joined the crew at the Bosse camp, Monday morning, making five, two horse teams in all and one ox team and Mr. Bosse is to have still more teams soon.

There was a plenty of snow here in the woods the first of the week and the birch was being moved rapidly to the mill yard in the Thompson mill yard, but Tuesday evening the 24th, it started raining and it just poured, like a real thunder shower until about nine o'clock Wednesday morning, putting all teaming to another standstill, with all rivers and brooks overflowed, and the county roads almost impassable.

Alfred Morrell's three teams with himself, Omer and Charlie Farrar as teamsters, are hauling Alfred's pulp from the Will Crockett lot, they come down through the Varney lot and onto the county road at the Sturtevant place.

A letter from Irving Bartlett to his mother, saying that where he is in Rhode Island, they have had only one inch of snow to date, Jan. 23rd. and that the pond right near them is not frozen over yet. Irving says he enjoys laying awake, listening to the radio in the room next to where he sleeps.

Joseph Bosse went to East Sumner, Sunday afternoon, for a load of groceries with his Essex coach.

At the Bosse lumber camp, Thursday morning, the 26th, there were ten horses and a pair of oxen rarin' to go to the woods, but very early their teamsters discovered that the river bridge near the entrance to the woods was two feet under water, also for a distance in the road across the Tuttle meadow, and all stock was kept in the stables upon the no pay list, with the exception of James Sickles' team, which went to East Sumner for supplies.

Doris Bartlett is stopping at home for the time, after working for some time at Hotel Long at Buckfield. Doris speaks often of the kindness tendered her by Mr. and Mrs. Brigham, the Proprietors, and that they also told her that the position was ready for her at any time she wished to return.

I read with much interest in Loose Pulpit Column, in Dec. 30th issue where Sawyer Brook was fished, and I am wondering if it was the Sawyer Brook in the Sea Pond region, where I hunted and fished for a number of seasons. I was a member of the Sawyer Brook Club, and we had a good camp on Sawyer Brook, two miles this side of Sea Pond. A scrap book has a number of hunting and fishing stories that I wrote up and were published in some of the large magazines of my rambles in that remote wilderness.

Friday morning, Joseph Bosse was on the scene very early and with the aid of his helper, they put in a temporary bridge upon the Tuttle meadow and the birch business was soon moving at its normal rate, after being held back on account of the heavy rain storm.

A young fellow by the name of Cummings, from South Paris is driving James Sickles' team, while Jimmie acts as foreman and helper. It was this boy's father that was drowned in Sea Pond a few years ago.

The Kenney Bros., of South Paris, John and Tom, each have an able team of horses on the Bosse birch job.

Mrs. Frederick Allen and little son came home from the Community Hospital, Sunday, January 29th.

Howard Thurston was the dinner guest of his uncle, Lee Elliott, last Saturday. He was on his way from his home in Farmington Falls to Oquossoc, where he is working in the woods this winter. Mr. Thurston was called home by the serious illness of his wife and the death of their infant daughter.

Nearly fifty attended the Grange meeting at Rumford Center, Saturday, Jan. 21, when the men furnished and prepared the dinner and washed the dishes and put them away. They had a fine dinner of mashed potatoes, sliced ham, salads, rolls, doughnuts, cakes, pies and coffee. At the next meeting, which will be February 4, the ladies will try and outdo the men and it is very certain they will do all of their own cooking.

The Community Obligation To Newspapers

By G. F. Rinehart, Editor of the Covington Citizen

It might be the occasion of more or less surprise to some people to even imply that the community has any obligation whatever to its newspaper. The average newspaper is regarded very often by the community as nothing more than a necessary evil, to be tolerated, but not encouraged.

As a veteran newspaper man, who understands the relations that obtain between the community and its newspaper and between the newspaper and its community, having had experience from both angles, and as one who does not hesitate to hold the newspaper to the highest ideals, I have no reluctance whatever in saying that, no matter what enterprises your community may contain; no matter what institutions it fosters; no matter what its opinions may be as to the relative values of various enterprises, the fact remains that the newspaper sustained as it deserves, is very frequently far and away its greatest assets.

A Philanthropic Institution

The newspaper is the one institution that stands forever in the forefront, the advance guard of community effort, the trained scout forever on the alert for danger, the skilled pilot leading the way to civic righteousness and community culture. No matter what philanthropies you may have in our community, your newspaper excels them all in relative largess and in the widespread distribution of its gifts. It is called upon any and all times, for any and all purposes to serve the public need, and leads all others in giving its stock in trade freely and voluntarily, and often in response to unreasonable and impertinent demands.

A Chronic Booster

The newspaper is the vital center, the nucleus, the ganglion—the soul of the community. About it centers the activities, the interchange, the quickening thoughts and impulses that mean community uplift, social betterment. It is the abiding friend, the good angel; the public utility always on the job, boosting for civic progress and social righteousness.

Reciprocal Relations

Naturally with such ideals of newspapering, I am sensible of the duties and obligations that the community owes to such an enterprise as the newspaper. I believe in reciprocity. I believe in the doctrine of appreciation. I believe in giving flowers to the living rather than to the dead; and so believing, I do not hesitate to say that the community owes decided obligations to its newspaper, and that these debts should be paid, not at a discount, but freely, fully, openly, as a matter of simple duty, as a fifty-fifty proposition on the business principle of give and take.

Newspaper Deserves Support

The first and last duty of the community to the newspaper is the obligation of support. Not in a sordid, contemptible spirit of the average man who thinks because he pays for a subscription that he owns the paper, but in the broad spirit of the man who willingly contributes his share to the support of his newspaper as a community investment which pays direct and measurable returns.

A Community Measure

The community is invariably measured by the support it gives its newspaper. This is the one yardstick, one infallible rule by which every community is judged, and it happens to be the very best index to community worth. The man who measures a community by the support it gives its newspaper, never makes a mistake. Dead communities wondering what is the matter with themselves, will do well to recognize this obvious fact. You cannot build up a community by knocking its best booster down. You kill a community when you kill its principal asset.

Not only should this support be financial, but it should be moral as well. The community should boost the newspaper which boosts the community. It is just as easy to cultivate the habit of saying a word of encouragement about a newspaper as it is to sound a note of disparagement. The average individual prefers the latter. He is a dispenser of gloom. He is a grouch against the newspaper, because it has not yet recognized his superior worth. Knowing nothing of the exactions of newspapering, he misjudges motives and is led into erroneous conclusions and rank injustices.

Ministerial Duty

If I were a minister, I would advertise in the local newspaper, or I would not sign my job. I would never ask an editor, struggling to pay his overhead, to give free space to exploit my announcements. I should regard religion as a going concern, as fully solvent and as able to pay dividends on the investment, and I would run the church on that basis, or I would not run it at all. Certainly I would not regard the church as a bankrupt concern, depending for its publicity on the grat[is] ies of the press.

An Ethical Proposition

If I were a doctor, I would advertise my skill. If I had no skill to advertise, I would get a hoe and develop my muscles in manual employment. I would not raise the question of ethics on printing advertising and accept with delight advertising which is free. It is never unethical to pay for what you get. The doctor, who cannot sense the inconsistency of his attitude, lacks perspective. The press advertises the doctor from the time he opens his office with out a patient until he is planted in the local cemetery, and then gives him free obituary, kindly refraining from mentioning the fact that his demise was due to taking or not taking his own medicine.

The Banker's Viewpoint

If I were a banker I should advertise freely in the local press. The banker deals in moneys and credits and he knows that an editor with a deposit is preferable to one who is a chronic borrower. He also knows that without the newspaper the weeds would grow in the city streets and that the average community does to make its money out of weeds.

The Merchant's Salvation

If I were a merchant, I would either advertise or get off the street. There is no excuse for any man to settle down in a town, which has been built up by the boosting of a newspaper and the boosters absorb, like a sponge, the trade and patronage brought to town by the live merchants who do advertise. In these times of high pressure, no business can succeed without advertising. The man who neglects his publicity, invites the Sheriff and the spider, for sooner or later he will find the store of the man who does not advertise. This type of merchant is fast being relegated to the oblivion he deserves by the growth of the mail order houses which merely capitalizes the ignorance of the small town merchant, who refuses to advertise.

The Chamber's Reliance

If I were a member of the Chamber of Commerce, I would not ask the newspaper to do all the community boosting free of charge. The community ought to pay its way. It is a poor neighborhood that depends for its growth and development on the exploitation of the newspaper and the periodical raids upon its space. Space is the only thing the newspaper has to sell, I should insist on the Chamber buying it and paying for it like any other going concern.

It is the abiding friend, the good angel; the public utility always on the job, boosting for civic progress and social righteousness.

Reciprocal Relations

Naturally with such ideals of newspapering, I am sensible of the duties and obligations that the community owes to such an enterprise as the newspaper. I believe in reciprocity. I believe in the doctrine of appreciation. I believe in giving flowers to the living rather than to the dead; and so believing, I do not hesitate to say that the community owes decided obligations to its newspaper, and that these debts should be paid, not at a discount, but freely, fully, openly, as a matter of simple duty, as a fifty-fifty proposition on the business principle of give and take.

Newspaper Deserves Support

The first and last duty of the community to the newspaper is the obligation of support. Not in a sordid and contemptible spirit of the average man, who thinks because he pays for a subscription that he owns the paper, but is the broad spirit of the man who willingly contributes his share to the support of his newspaper as a community investment which pays direct and measurable returns.

A Community Measure

The community is invariably measured by the support it gives its newspaper. This is the one yardstick, the one infallible rule by which every community is judged, and it happens to be the very best index to community worth. The man who measures a community by the support it gives its newspaper, never makes a mistake. Dead communities, wondering what is the matter with themselves, will do well to recognize this obvious fact. You cannot build up a community by knocking its best booster down. You kill a community when you kill its principal asset.

Not only should this support be financial, but it should be moral as well. The community should boost the newspaper which boosts the community. It is just as easy to cultivate the habit of saying a word of encouragement about a newspaper as it is to sound a note of disparagement. The average individual prefers the latter. He is a dispenser of gloom. He is a grouch against the newspaper, because it has not yet recognized his superior worth. Knowing nothing of the exactions of newspapering, he misjudges motives and is led into erroneous conclusions and rank injustices.

Ministerial Duty

If I were a minister, I would advertise in the local newspaper, or I would resign my job. I would never ask an editor, struggling to pay his overhead, for free space to exploit my announcements. I should regard religion as a going concern, as fully solvent and as able to pay dividends on the investment, and I would run the church on that basis, or I would not run it at all. Certainly I would not regard the church as a bankrupt concern depending for its publicity on the gratuities of the press.

An Ethical Proposition

If I were a doctor, I would advertise my skill. If I had no skill to advertise, I would get a hoe and develop my muscles in manual employment. I would not raise the question of ethics on paid advertising and accept with delight advertising which is free. It is never unethical to pay for what you get. The doctor, who cannot sense the inconsistency of his attitude, lacks perspective. The press advertises the doctor free from the time he opens his office without a patient until he is planted in the local cemetery, and then gives him a free obituary, kindly refraining from mentioning the fact that his demise was due to taking or not taking his own medicine.

The Banker's Viewpoint

If I were a banker I should advertise freely in the local press. The banker deals in moneys and credits and he knows that an editor with a deposit is preferable to one who is a chronic borrower. He also knows that without the newspaper, the weeds would grow in the city streets, and that the average community does not make its money out of weeds.

The Merchant's Salvation

If I were a merchant, I would either advertise or get off the street. There is no excuse for any man to settle down in a town, which has been built up by the boosting of a newspaper and there absorb, like a sponge, the trade and patronage brought to town by the live merchants who do advertise. In these times of high pressure, no business can succeed without advertising. The man who neglects his publicity, invites the Sheriff and the spider, for sooner or later both find the store of the man who does not advertise. This type of merchant is being relegated to the oblivion he deserves by the growth of the mail order house, which merely capitalizes the ignorance of the small town merchant, who refuses to advertise.

The Chamber's Reliance

If I were a member of the Chamber of Commerce, I would not ask the newspaper to do all the community boosting free of charge. The community ought to pay its way. It is a poor neighborhood that depends for its growth and development on the exploitation of the newspaper and the periodical raids upon its space. As space is the only thing the newspaper has to sell, I should insist on the Chamber's buying it and paying for it like any other business concern.

The Woman's Auxiliary

If I were a club woman, I would see to it that my obligation to the newspaper was discharged with scrupulous regards to recieprocal balance. I would see to it that the newspaper, which carried my propaganda, which exploited my wares with lavish disregard for the value of space, secured what little jobs of printing I had to bestow, without entering into competition with the alley job printer, who could be no possibility render me such service.

The Citizen's Aid

If I were simply a resident of a community without profession or calling, I should first recognize the fact that the newspaper is my most hopeful ally, my community dependence, my civic partner, and I should make it a point to get acquainted with the editor, say a good word occasionally, and let him know that as a member of the community, I appreciated his good work, recognized his difficulties and sympathized with his efforts at community up-building. I should not regard the small amount I paid him for subscription as a mortgage on his plant, nor that the editor was under obligations to join my side in a local controversy. I should think twice before I stopped my subscription, because I saw something in the paper I did not like, or because I received a notice that my subscription was in arrears.

Fifty-Fifty Proposition

The obligations of a community to its newspaper are just as definite, just as fixed and immutable, just as imperative, as the obligations of the newspaper to the community. The relations are mutual and reciprocal. Let us give to our communities the sort of newspapers duty demands, and then let us insist, first, last and all the time, not as a gratuity, not as a favor, but as a matter of right, upon receiving in return the obligtions due to us.

Note—This article was sent by a friend in California, who made bold to say the Norway Advertiser had done more for the town than the community had for the paper. We put it this way: Both have worked together and the town and the paper have prospered.—Editor

THAT DARN TRANSFORMER

There are many things that can go wrong with the average radio receiving set, but when the batteries are charged, the screws tightened, the aerial in excellent shape, the ground wire properly adjusted, and all the other "little things" humming nicely take a look at the transformers.

The trouble is often there. In fact, it is "very, very" often there. Seekers after distance have a habit of throwing the power on full before things are properly warmed up, and instead of taking the charge gracefully, the transformer is likely to burn out.

THE LOCAL NEWSPAPER

When it is said that the country newspaper is real, it actually means that it is an institution whose members and correspondents the readers know in the flesh. And the fact that town and farm people have similar interests accounts for their keen interest in each other, and to a large degree is the reason for the strong hold the country newspaper has on them. The country newspaper is a mirror reflecting its community, a mirror catching the every day activities of the town and farm folk.

Oxford County United Parish

Including Albany, North Lovell, Stoneham and the Waterfords. Pastoral Staff: Revs. W. I. Bull, B. F. Wentworth, A. C. Townsend

In Cincinnati has been recently held a Church Comity Conference to study ways and means for a closer cooperation among the denominations. Much interest was shown in inter-denominational larger parishes, of which Oxford County United Parish seems to be the pioneer. An exhibit of the work and plans of this Parish, consisting of a map, pictures, calendar and program occupied a prominent place at the Cincinnati Conference. Some such plan, modified to meet local conditions, is likely to be adopted in many places in the near future. May our mistakes be avoided, and our achievements be improved upon wherever the plan shall be tried!

"Church Night," which is being tried out at Waterford Flat, is proving a success in spite of weather and sickness. It is likely to be continued beyond the five nights originally planned for. It consists of a half hour of social intercourse and worship; a half hour of Bible Study and Junior Christian Training, (two groups meeting simultaneously); a short intermission for light refreshments; a half hour of vocal music instruction, and World Service Study, (two groups); closing with a short period of recreation.

At this week's session, the stereopticon is being used, showing the slides of Supt. Bliss' lecture, "The Glory That Is Maine."

We were too late to secure a stereopticon lecture on the Life of Lincoln for Feb. 12th, but we are to have it for the four Sundays beginning Feb. 19th. Watch for later announcements of dates and places.

The Federated Churches of Waterford and South Waterford, Methodist, Universalist and Congregationalist, are to make a special offering on Feb. 12th for the World Service of these three denominations.

The next moving picture (for the week beginning Feb. 5th) is to be The Ancient Highway, by James Oliver Curwood. Usual schedule of showings: No. Waterford, Tuesday; South Waterford, Wednesday; East Stoneham, Thursday; North Lovell, Friday. Circle suppers probably at some of the places on picture evenings.

The Community Improvement Association of North Waterford, through its Fire Department, is planning for more adequate fire protection. The community is to be canvassed for the sale of fire extinguishers, large and small; ladders are to be made and buckets bought, to be stored in easily accessible places. When a similar organization shall have been perfected in each community of the Parish, then what say to a Fire-drill-day, with contests and honors for the most efficient bucket brigade? Why not plan for this as a feature of next summer's annual field day?

The date of the annual Winter Carnival and drama is Feb. 25th at North Waterford.

THE FRUIT CUP HABIT

The woman who gets into the habit of serving a fruit cup each day, is very wise. This is not merely because fruit is tasty but with the exception of one or two such as cranberries and plums, all fruits have a decided alkaline reaction when taken into the stomach and thus tend to relieve the acidity that most of us know as well. Oranges have a particular strong alkaline reaction, and fortunately fit into most fruit cups. Pineapples, banannas, grapefruits, cherries and apples are all alkaline also—and these too are fruit cup fruits. Really this course should be called "Health Cup" rather than by its present name.

Band .... Town

The children all did fine, the little playlets were funny. The single pieces excellent. The toy band was all right. There were about thirty-five children with bells, triangle, drum and zobos. The town band was a real pleasure for it has been more than thirty-years since this vicinity could boast of a band. There are two cornetists who belong to the company who were unable to be present at this first public appearance.

A company of friends gave Mrs. Mark Richardson a very pleasant surprise party at her home, Wednesday evening, Jan. 25. They carried with them refreshments and a very beautiful and useful gift. All had a very enjoyable time.

Abner Mann is suffering with infection in his hand caused by a blister on the palm. He has been unable to work for a week. He is better now.

Mrs. Lena S. Herrick has finished clerking for S. T. White and gone to Portland for a while on account of her health caused by colds followed by a run down condition.

Martha Day is the new clerk in White's drug store.

The Christian Endeavor held a social at the home of Geraldine Williams, Tuesday evening.

The W. C. T. U. held a union meeting at the M. E. chapel last Sunday evening. The subject was "Peace, not War." The program consisted of a paper, "What the W. C. T. U. is doing," and mentioned the World Peace Conferences, etc. Two poems, "No Slacker", read by Mrs. Mountfort; "World's Patriotism," read by Mrs. Patch. Rev. E. H. Stover gave an interesting talk and Rev. E. B. Forbes gave an illustrated poem telling of the various instruments of war called hate and how the virtues of love can change all to peace. Three little boys with chemicals demonstrated what a red liquid, called hate, could color a globe of pure water blood red but when the white chemical, love, was diffused into the globe it changed it all back again. It was a very pretty and impressive illustration. A chorus choir led in the singing and three extra leaflet peace songs were sung.

Y. M. C. A. Planning Carnival—Women's Farm Bureau Meeting—Miss Alice Mundt in Rome.

Wonder what Candlemas day will bring?

The Y. M. C. A. at Gould are planning on a carnival, the date set is February 22, all sorts of sports are on the program. The ski race arousing much interest.

Miss Florence Nye is in town on her annual visit, in behalf of the Children's Home Society. She meets with very good success.

A largely attended meeting of the Women's Farm Bureau was held Friday; it was an all day meeting and the women of the community were invited to attend. Miss Effie Bradeen was present. Kitchen Improvements was the project to be considered. A very profitable meeting was enjoyed. A square meal was served to thirty-one. Several came in for the afternoon.

Miss Alice Mundt, who, after her graduation from College in Boston, made a brief visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mundt, and family, left for Europe the last of June, 1927, as traveling companion to a Boston woman, writes that they are now in Rome for several weeks' stay, saw the King and Queen on a "Royal" day and enjoyed the Colossium by moonlight; she had an opportunity to visit her brother's grave, Geo. A. Mundt, in Flanders Field, and secured an accurate picture of it, and also of the white plot of sacred ground. Miss Mundt is a graduate of Gould Academy. The educational advantages of the trip to the different countries is much appreciated. She expects to get back to the United States sometime next summer.

Mrs. Alta Bird and children visited at W. I. Becker's in Albany, Sunday.

At this writing, the snow plow is out of commission, but will soon be ready for action. In many places, the roads are very icy.

Paul Chapman was a guest of his aunt, Mrs. John H. Wilson, of Berlin, N. H., from Thursday until Sunday evening. While there, he attended the carnival, Friday and Saturday and greatly enjoyed it he returned on the evening train, Sunday, to be in school, Monday.

Miss Angie Chapman was a guest of Mrs. A. E. K. Grover, Sunday afternoon.

Olin Boothman is at Harvard College, taking a course in accounting. He is a graduate of Gould Academy and hopes to soon be able to write C. P. A. after his name; he is a relative of Anson Kendall, who is a student in the Harvard Medical School there.

In spite of the cold day last Sunday the churches were well filled. A special feature at the Congregational Church was a chorus of twenty male voices under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. L. A. Edwards, rendered several beautiful selections and led the congregational singing.

The snow plow is in shape again, in case of a fall of snow to drift the roads again.

Alton Paine and children were in Albany, Sunday afternoon, with his mother, Mrs. Minnie Littlefield; his grandmother, Mrs. Ora Saunders, who has been ill for several months, passed away at that time.

Word was received by relatives and friends that Alfred Bean of Paris St., Norway, passed to the Higher Life, Saturday evening, January 28. Mr. Bean was a native of Bethel, the only son of the late Render Bean, but has lived in Norway for several years.

The general committee of the Y. M. C. A. of Gould Academy for the Carnival to be held Feb. 22, are Mr. Brasier, Earl Bryant, Homer Gregory and Emil Johnson.

The debaters of the varsity debating squad in the Bates League are Milan Chapin, Earl Bryant, Ernest Hancock, Rebecca Carter, Adelaide Bean, and Homer Gregory.

Mrs. Carl Brown and Mrs. Charles Crosby were in Norway, Tuesday, to attend the funeral of Alfred Bean.

Bert Sanborn was reported as being more comfortable and a slight improvement was apparent.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

The nearer your dish closet is to your sink, the fewer steps needed to put the dishes away after they are washed. An ideal way is to have the dish closet in the connecting wall between the dining room and kitchen, adjacent to the sink on the kitchen side. Clean dishes are taken out in the dining room, and used ones are passed through the closet to be washed and put away without an unnecessary step.

Fresh coffee may often be removed from tablecloths and other white goods by pouring boiling water on them from a height of 2 or 3 feet. Stretch the part stained over a bowl which will catch the water. The last trace of the stain can usually be removed by washing with soap and water. If the stains are on wool or silk material, sponge with cold or lukewarm water. If a grease spot from the cream remains after the spot has dried, remove it by using one of the grease solvents such as gasoline, carbon tetrachlorid Chloroform, ether, naptha, or benzol. Old stains often require the use of special chemicals.

Lemon juice softens water and renders washing less difficult. It also helps to remove dirt and grease, but be careful not to use it on colored clothes.

Here is a little coffee trick. When you get the next pound of ground coffee, mix it thoroughly with one teaspoonful of cocoa or chocolate. You will be agreeably suprised at the result.

If silver has grown discolored or stained, rubbing it first with lemon and later with alcohol and common whiting mixed, will give it a high lustre.

What is the biggest need or desire of the family for the coming year? An automobile? A home of your own? A good vacation? Radio? School or college graduation? More or better clothes? Make out your spending plan with an eye to whatever you want most; then see how you can subordinate less important needs or wants to get the one big thing. For example, two dollars a week saved from January 1 to July will take care of commencement at high school or provide a two week's vacation for mother, or bring some splended books into the house. Two dollars a week and sometimes more can be trimmed from ordinary expenditures with surprising ease, once the whole family starts cooperating in the game of "Beat the Budget." Bigger wants take more weekly savings, but the principal is the same.

LITTLE HOUSEHOLD HINTS

In boiling fish add lemon juice to the water; this helps to keep it whole and thus preserves flavor and nutriment.

Incindentally a few drops of lemon juice in the water in which old potatoes are cooking will keep them from discoloring, or a few drops in the food chopper before grinding sticky fruits, such as figs, raisins or dates, will make the grinder easier to clean and keep the food from sticking to the utensil.

If the mica on the stove needs cleaning, try a solution of vinegar and water.

Is your carpet faded? Try wiping it off with a damp cloth that has been wrung from a strong solution of salt and water. Then sprinkle moistened salt over the carpet and give it a good sweeping.

There might not be so many triangular love affairs if there were more square meals.

Lovell's Hiking Club

Ladies of Lovell Full of Pep and Vigor—The Male of the Species Sit Up and Take Notice

With every apology to the jocund writer, on the Women's Hiking Club of Lovell, I would like to straighten matters out a little, and add a few items, which would perhaps be of interest to our readers.

Our writer of last week's editorial laid great stress on the ludicrous position in which some of the members were placed; greatly over-rated the dimensions of their stomachs, etc., and yet he did not mention any of the duties involved, preparatory to their afternoon's pleasure, nor bring out any of the good points of the Club.

These fair damsels rose in the early morning hours prepared the morning meal, hustled the children off to school, and after the exodus of the master to the village store, cleaned the living room of boots, slippers, gloves, cigar ashes, papers, etc. Unfortunately, a few had husbands of an easy turn of mind, who prefer the arm chair and radio to the store, so they cheerfully swept the "rolling kitties" from underneath the rocking chair, carefully brushed the match stubs from around his feet and went away singing, to prepare a hot dinner. She also made ready the supper for her return. After tucking in a few extra sticks of wood in the stove "so hub wouldn't have to shut off the radio," she sailed forth into the fresh air.

He failed to mention how some of the members assisted the aged with their burdens, over the long hills, while a few strayed behind to enjoy the companionship of the weary who were hunting for a stronger foothold, to ease the aching limbs.

As for the caddy-house roof: It has held up under the curses and oaths of the male players on the green and polluted the nearby hills with its echoes. If it can't hold up a few strong, clean minded women long enough for a snapshot—away with it.

I was an observer of a little incident that happened on one of the hiking days. When the merry party rounded the store corner, a crowd of males, which included many of the respected men of the town, were lined up on the platform. They stood aghast! Their jaws sagged, their eyes protruded, and their arms were paralyzed: not a hand moved to touch their hats.

It was not with pity nor disgust that I watched them, but a thrill of joy swept over me for I knew that their chrysalis of ignorance was bursting forth into a wonderful butterfly of realization—Of what, you may ask? That the women of Lovell had slipped their chains of drudgery and care and had broken forth into the sunlight to add a gentler touch to nature by silhouetting their graceful forms and slender contours against the white, glistening fields, with the stately pines for a background. No wonder they were struck dumb by the suddenness of it all.

It was a wonderful picture of physique and womanhood, the spirit of which will echo in the homes of men.

As for one of the members rolling down hill, the mere insinuation is absurd. She was demonstrating on a modern and unique method of digesting doughnuts and sandwiches. Each time she rolled over, owing to agility, good flesh and firm muscles, she rebounded on, to the foot of the hill, the doughnuts well on their way to digestion, and the demonstrator free from jar or bruises.

This method was proved to be far better than those of the opposite sex, which is of sitting on a dry goods box beside a roaring fire, toping off on three or four cigarettes, that would set the heart a pace that a hiker could not attain by scaling the steepest grade in Lovell.

And now a word for the early violet or forget-me-not, whichever she was, who was headed for North Lovell. Her doughnuts didn't list, they were serving for a ballast to keep her light form on the ground.

She was impersonating the "Spirit of the West Wind," her lithe and slender figure swaying in the sunshine before the flying cloud of snow. She reached home in time for supper; looked well to the duties of her household, has found time to put an extra patch on her hubby's pants and started out on the last hike with a breezy canter that would wind the sturdiest oak or the slimest sprout in Lovell.

One malicious gander was heard to be "honking" about the Clumsy Club. Let him waddle on. The hikers know he can't swim.

I sincerely think that after the men have become accustomed to to these beautiful pictures of nature, they will again resume their kindly manners and genial smile which has already made them respected citizens.

Let us hear from you again, my fireside friend, but be cautious in preparing your editorial as rumor tells me that some day when the gentle breezes blow, you perchance might find yourself gently wafted from your warm corner and borne gracefully on the shoulders of the "West Wind", out into the sunlight and fresh air to join the Hiking Club.

As for rolling snow, a few more days of consideration of the income tax payers, and they will take out a few more dollars from their tightly rolled wad and the majestic snow eagle will sweep through the highways while the laughing crocuses, dainty forget-me-nots and stately daffodils will follow on behind, carrying the thought of Thomas Carlyle in their minds. "From the lowly depths, the loftiest heights may be obtained."

HOMES OF EARTH

Earth has been used for building dwellings and other structures for many centuries. One method of use, superior to others and which was known and used by the Romans, is being revived for modern buildings. The method consists of ramming slightly moist earth, without the addition of straw or other material between movable forms, and is known by the French name, "pise de terre" which means "rammed earth". Rammed earth is a reliable building material when properly handled and is admirably adapted to building on farms, especially if suitable earth is at hand. Where it is difficult to obtain other building materials such as are commonly used for farm structures, earth may be a successful substitute because it is already on the building site. A suitable soil consists of a mixture of clay and sand. Earth that forms into clods when dug will likely prove suitable. Earth of the proper kind, tamped hard in forms like those used for concrete construction will make very desirable walls, possessing excellent insulating qualities. Such walls have been known to stand for a hundred years or more. Instruction for "rammed earth" construction can be obtained from the U. S. Depatment of Agriculture.

WATERFORD

Some Illness in Town—Christine Gardner Substituting as Organist at the Church—Mrs. Lockwood Dead—Ice Business Progressing Rapidly.

Mrs. Nancy Jewett does not gain very fast from her recent illness. She has been suffering from pleurisy for a few days.

Charles Morse and Walter Fillebrown are reported sick. Theirs' in an afflicted household, as Mrs. Fillebrown has not fully recovered from her attack of grip and bronchitis.

Christine Gardner is filling the position of church organist in a very satisfactory manner during the illness of the regular organist. We are proud of our talented young people who are so willing to help in any way they can.

Word has been received here of the death of Mrs. Charles Lockwood of New York. The Lockwoods are well known here. They have a summer home in this village. Mrs. Lockwood has been in poor health for a long time.

Charles Fillebrown hitches his two dogs to a sled and has many gay rides behind his "dog team." We wonder if he is getting ready for the Carnival.

Blanche Tyler has been sick for a few days. Virginia Tyler and Gerald Gardner have been out of school on account of illness, but are better now.

The high wind was responsible for the lack of electric lights on Wednesday evening. The wires were crossed at South Waterford which made a short circuit and blew out the fuses. The trouble was attended to by E. L. Stone and P. E. Kimball. No harm was done, but the Circle supper and pictures at So. Waterford were delayed somewhat.

Ice business is progressing rapidly this good weather. The ice machine is a great improvement over the old way of sawing by hand, but very likely in a few years, when electric refrigerators are more plenty, using ice made by natural, instead of artificial means will be regarded as being a very antiquated method of obtaining ice.

DAILY BATH QUESTION

Is it necessary and should it be practised?

The following comes to the office with request to print:

"No doubt we should learn to appreciate our public health service, if for no other reason than to be progressive and keep in line with the State Public Health Association, who has it in charge, although this might be considered a debatable question.

Does a person not ill enough to require constant care, but, who can get along with a half an hour attention, need that daily bath?

How many well people indulge in a daily bath?

I have read somewhere that bathing to reduce temperature is not necessary unless it reaches 103 degrees F. and stays there for several hours and then it is not always necessary.

Wouldn't a daily bath for some moderately sick people be such a surprise to them that it might do more harm than good?

Even those accustomed to a daily bath while in good health, wouldn't mind going without it two or three days unless it was necessary to reduce temperature and if such is necessary, half an hour of attention daily is not sufficient but such cases should receive constant care."

Mrs. Sampson used dishes that were her grandmother's and great-grandmother's that were much admired. The afternoon was devoted to auction with four tables in play. Owing to the icy streets, the members were transported to and from the party by B. B. Bicknell, who managed to manipulate the auto with no accident.
